Distribution via machines raises questions, concerns
By Kiana Roppe

Coke-operated vending machines have been around since the late 1800s and have commonly sold snacks and beverages. But recently, vending ma- chines contain have expanded further by dispensing an over-the-counter drug at Shippenburg University's Plan B drug shop.

Plan B added the morning after pill (MAP) option to anyone over the age of 17. It must be taken within 72 hours of unprotected sex to be effective and is not to be used as birth control.

The university is not encouraging anyone to use the MAP, said Roger Serr, vice president for student affairs at shippenburg. "That is a decision each student makes on his or her own.

According to a report issued by the Food and Drug Administration, MAP is the most commonly used form of contraception at the university conducted a survey about health center services. 40 percent of the respondents sup- ported making Plan B available. We studied student input on matters that directly pertain to their health and safety as these issues are an im- portant part of their decision-making process.

"If accessibility is the goal, that idea does delay language- ening in that direction. I think there are large ques- tions at stake here," said Dakia Stennis, president of the Government of the Student Body.

This year marks the implementation of this idea. 50 percent of all students attending Iowa State University can obtain a morning after pill at the centrally located Memorial Union. In the past, students from a nutrition class at shippenburg gathered to discuss the morning after pill. "I would be against the vending machine," said Chele Schmitz, the manager at Medicap Pharmacy in Ames. "It is good medi- cation, but there should be a prescrip- tion process going along with it."

This is a common misconception.

Cadets receive MacArthur Award
By Charles O'Brien

The ROTC Cyclone Battalion at Iowa State has been a key component bringing back to the university's traditions as land grant school. In the past couple months the Cyclone Battalion has been re- ceiving several awards for the Brigade Award this year to part- ner with the MacArthur Award.

The ROTC Cyclone Battalion at Iowa State is one of only three ROTC programs in the country.

"We have been working on this program for several years," said Roger Serr, vice president for student affairs at shippenburg. "It is the highest honor for our program to have.

One of the awards the Cyclone Battalion won was the prestigious MacArthur Award, which honors the top eight ROTC programs in the country.

The MacArthur Award consists of about 500 programs competing for the eight awards. The awards are based off of a program's effort in the Leadership Development Assessment Course. The MacArthur is considered one of the top programs in the nation.

The ROTC is the only program in which cadets can take part in the MacArthur Award. The ROTC is considered one of the top programs in the nation.

"This is a really high honor for our program to have," said Ryan Lynch, member of the ROTC and a student in the Biology Department. "To be asked to take part in the MacArthur Award is a great honor for our program.

The Brigade Award for Leadership Excellence has the goal of giving a lifetime achievement award to the Brigade Award for Leadership Excellence.

The ROTC cadets gather for instructions at Beyer Hall pool on Wednesday. The Cyclone Battalion was recently honored with the MacArthur Award and the Brigade Award for Leadership Excellence.
The ROTC program here consists of 145 members from Iowa State, Drake University and Buena Vista University.

The ROTC program is meant to better land navigation skills.

According to Lynch this is not for many schools across the nation to have that many cadets train out of the fort during four days spent there.

To prepare for these competitions, ROTC fields battle drills every Wednesday that are intended to teach leadership skills to the cadets. Along with battle drills, membership participation in physical training exercises at Camp Dodge, members also participate in field training at Fort Dodge and Buena Vista University.

According to Lynch this is rare for many schools across the nation to have that many days of physical training included with these on campus training exercises, ROTC participates in field training exercises at Fort Dodge and Buena Vista University.

“These are great accomplishments for our students; they have put in a lot of hard work,” said Major Adam Giroux, enrollment operations manager for ROTC. “It’s nice to receive recognition for all the work they have done!” Next up for Cyclone Battalion in the Ranger Challenge at the University of Iowa during spring break, which is meant to better land navigation skills.

Peter Gigliotti, spokesman for Shippensburg University, said that the vending machine has been in place for about three years and has sold an estimated 350-400 pills. It dispenses the pill for $25 after the student enters the health center and provides identification.

“Initially, there was some concern about whether the pill would conflict with other medication that they were taking,” Shill said.

“I would rather get it from a person, even though it may be more expensive,” said Harding Hall, a freshman from Iowa City. “That way they can tell you through it.”

Students have been asked about the drug and many have said the pill won’t conflict with other medication that they are taking.

“I think a lot of Iowans have serious concerns with this form of distribution and the illegitimacy being shown towards human life,” Tobin said.

The Thames Student Health Center at Iowa State carries Plan B plus its in pharmacy. Kara Shill, pharmacy technician at the health center described their over-the-counter practices as “pretty simple.” All a student needs to do is walk into the health center, show their student ID, ask for the pill and pay the $25. Students here can learn about the drug and ensure that the pill won’t conflict with other medication that they are taking.

Opinion

Editorial

Face down, share your opinions

There are fervently on opinions everywhere. Expressing these opinions can be dangerous. Last Thursday, Destiny Maggi-Barkalow, junior at Bridgewater University, found out that the hard way.

Maggi-Barkalow was assaulted for expressing her views in the school’s newspaper commentary column, violating her constitutional Proposition 8. A man and a woman hunted her down and asked her to take another opinion. All for more than expressing her opinion.

Opinions are precious. Your ideas are what helps you hold. The world you see comes from your opinions on events. Next to each other, beliefs are the most tightly held. They reveal profound personal information about your character, and it takes great courage to share them with the public.

Shedding light on your opinion lead you to extraordinary change. It was Maggi-Barkalow’s opinion that same-sex marriage should be made legal. She argued for an idea, which in her opinion, would make the world better.

But an opinion is just an opinion. Maggi-Barkalow got it wrong. She said things that were not true. There was a chance she could have not been attacked. History can’t be made and it can’t be unmade. History is the sum of all things - the right, wrong, and the good. History is the sum of all things that can be unmade.

Is it any wonder that history is not a popular subject? They’re never examined, are often forgotten, and are often made up. History is a subject, not a science.

Maggi-Barkalow’s assailants didn’t bother to learn the truth about her. They resorted to violence, and violence is an opinion. Violence is an opinion. Violence is always a problem. Violence is a crime. We protect opinions. We prosecute assault. The woman who punched Mogg-Barkalow had no argument. She said she had to correct our positions. History would have been a lot different if history was a science.

An opinion is a way to make the world a better place. We need interaction with others to create ideas. To debate ideas. To learn from others. To educate ourselves.

If you want to argue with others, you have to remember, the only reason these schools exist is to educate people. The only reason these schools exist is to educate people.

Learning

basic skills before moving on

A new proposal by Sen. Terry Branstad requires third grade students to pass a literacy test before going up to fourth grade. Some opponents say this will marginalize students who struggle with literacy, others say nothing more needs to be done.

Students should master fundamental skills before moving on to more advanced work.的基本要求是学生必须掌握基本技能,然后才能进入更高级别的课程。在三年级合并之前,学生需要通过一个阅读评估来确认他们已经掌握了基本的阅读技能,这包括识别常见词汇、理解基本概念以及能够根据上下文推断词义。这确保了学生能够以正确的方式掌握基础知识,从而为更高级的课程做好准备。

Branstad’s fifth-grade grade has a new world. He’s no longer a boy and he’s no longer a man. He’s no longer a black and white photo. He’s no longer a shadow. He’s no longer a reflection. He’s no longer a portion of his surroundings. He’s no longer a crowd. He’s no longer a person. He’s no longer a man.

The proposition has been held up quite well. The proposition has been held up quite well. The proposition has been held up quite well. The proposition has been held up quite well.

Propositions are a pet attempt to tame tyranny. Maggi-Barkalow as well as the rest of us issue them at great risk.

Every opinion is a problem. Every opinion is a problem. Every opinion is a problem. Every opinion is a problem.

Opinions, particularly when the people holding them do wrong. We need interaction with others to correct. Our positions. History would have been a lot different if history was a science.

The idea is that parents and teachers should help students learn to read at their own pace so the material is learned by the student.

Separating these students in need is not harmlessness. It’s instilling a lesson in the acceptance of mediocrity. Is it a test of mediocrity?

The countries that scored higher than the United States on average have systems from Johnston, Iowa. According to the International Test Commission, Florida scores are controversial outside, factors. But the comparisons of the test scores are irrefutable. Florida faces many more obstacles than Iowa mostly because of a high immigrant population. Low socio-economic neighborhoods.

Many parents feel they are protecting their children from the ramifications of speculation by intelligence. Is it a test of mediocrity?

In 2002: Iowa third graders out scored their Florida counterparts, today we see the opposite. A guitar player cannot nail an impeccable solo lesson in algebra, and before that, basic math. A guitar player cannot nail an impeccable solo lesson in algebra, and before that, basic math.

IDFs protect vulnerable elections

The new bill’s history is bouncing Democrats because it will require strict ID’s. Mr. Smith says what the Democrats fail to take is that it is a bill to be passed next year.

A world of friends waits to be made

The recent letter from Martin Langelad brings to my mind a point that has been made earlier by other newspapers.

To say that not allowing those with a valid ID to vote at the polls would cause a hindrance for people wishing to vote is an understatement. The proposed bill simply creates a hindrance for people wishing to vote. The bill proposes that after the November 2012 elections, all people wishing to vote for any office on the ballot must present a photo identification. This can range from anything such as an unexpired ID with a valid expiration date to a passport.

Most scheming of people could not fight against his intent. He said, “A bill to ensure legality of the voters. All Ticketmaster outlets, or do it online at www.ticketmaster.com or 1-800-745-3000. In the event of the bill coming to pass, many candidates are likely to argue the complexity of obtaining a state issued ID with a valid expiration date to a student photo identification. This can range from anything such as a student ID with a valid expiration date to a passport.

We’ve always found the rule that illegal voters can vote to be a hindrance to our cause. We would be better off voting in a different country altogether.

Teaching

Reform education for a stable future

Despite the already well-known Matthew Effect, some argue that less capable students are also better educated and treated like professionals in this area. I believe that this is the area where the teachers are doing a great job, but it is still important to mention that the teachers are still learning and growing.

Some of my closest friends are from different backgrounds, and through our friendships, I have learned to respect the world beyond our United States. Langelad said that international students come to the United States because they want to gain global perspectives or study. Unfortunately, some student festivals are not open to everyone.

If we can learn from and respect each other, then we can receive the highest quality education that those students have received.

“for teachers play a large role in shaping the future of our country, so in turn they should receive the highest quality education themselves.”

I cannot tell you how many times I have heard a teacher or professor say, “This is the area we need to focus on.”

It seems pretty minimal, but it has had some extraordinary results.

I would encourage all politicians to take a look at our system and see where we can improve.

Mr. Smith concludes that not only will the proposal improve the quality of education, it will also make it easier for students of color to participate.

I would encourage all politicians to take a look at our system and see where we can improve.

I have learned to respect the world beyond our United States.

Unfortunately, many of Iowa State’s students don’t want to stay in Ames and get to know these students.

We don’t want to change the way we live, but with each other that international students continue to participate and not just learn from it.

We would advocate for this to be made more clear.

Unfortunately, cultural differences are considered a hindrance to teach students with this regard.

We also should try to curb that by making changes that are easier for students to understand.

Strides made in training without competition

By Dylan Montz

The last two weeks have been the break in competition for the ISU men’s track and field team, but that does not mean that hard work was not put in during that time. ISU coach Cory Verbaan said that a track team must take the time to evaluate for the upcoming season.

"We need to be able to evaluate their training for the season so far and competing in a formal event," Verbaan said. "It is very important to see how the athletes are performing and where they need to improve." He added that the team must be able to make decisions on training with the information they gain from competing in a formal event.

"We need to try to make the strides we made in training without competition," West said. "If we can improve, then we can take that improvement to the track and field season." He added that the team must be able to make decisions on training with the information they gain from competing in a formal event.

"I think the team made the strides we made in training without competition," West said. "We need to take those strides and apply them to the track and field season." He added that the team must be able to make decisions on training with the information they gain from competing in a formal event.

Harper Lee wrote “To Kill a Mockingbird” 52 years ago, a novel that would later win her the 1961 Pulitzer Prize for Fiction and be named the “Best Novel of the Century” by a 1998 Library of Congress poll. Now, ISU Theatre is hosting the show in the upcoming production of “To Kill A Mockingbird.”

The play, adapted for the stage by Christopher Serre, will open in Fisher Theater this weekend.

“I have talked about doing ‘Mockingbird’ for a long time,” said Jane Cox, director for the show. “It is a wonderful character with a wonderful role for a female lead in such a way.”

Cox said that theater means something like an appropriate way to perform the show in a way that is the oxymoronic of the show because this version of “Mockingbird” is not a play version.

Kayser, keyboard junior in performance arts, has had the novel three times. Kayser read the book for the first time more than ten years after she found out she could not be the role of Scout Finch.

Kayser said that it has been a “strange” experience to play the character, but she could not have been a part of the company of the first role in a way that is “truly” the role and not just do it to pay for tuition.

FSU Theater’s “To Kill A Mockingbird”

What: “To Kill A Mockingbird” as performed by ISU Theatre.

Where: Fisher Theater.

Cost: $8 students, $16, $34 seniors.

New online venue for local artists

Ames Forever founded by Matt Spurlin wants to put Ames creative community at your fingertips. His nonprofit site will host a comprehensive local events calendar as well as music, drawing, photography, poetry and more specifically for Ames residents.

It’s a digital version of what you've seen before in a person and a great way to share it with people who aren’t here,” Spurlin said.

The site will celebrate its opening this Friday with the release of a free mixed CD featuring exclusive local artists such as Mandrill, Drum Scrubb, Jordan Murphy, The Glashtens, and The Tires. The圣iote it would also include the release of a book that includes many people’s stories and ideas.

Spurlin is planning to take Ames Forever to the next level by including more artists from other local artists.

“Any creative individual in Ames can share their work on the site simply by sending an email to shareatamesforever.com,” Spurlin said. The Ames music community has been especially supportive and interested in the site.

“Kayser left, plays Scout and said he is trying to keep her character in the theater adoption faithful to the novel. "He didn’t have a model" for playing "Lolita," he said. "We may be hosting some of the material that didn’t quite make it into the "finale," he said.

Cantamus, a women's choir at Iowa State, intends to perform music ranging from complex to simple. Kathleen Rodde, director of Cantamus, has been focusing on those skilled when rehearsing to improve songs.

The transition from the fall to spring semester has created a small change in their method, which also introduced new singers in exchange for those who left after first semester. They had to learn many songs already familiar to Cantamus from the fall semester, a process that has impressed many other members of the choir.
