Final debate will feature foreign policy

The fourth final debate of the 2012 presidential race will be at 8 p.m. CST Thursday, President Barack Obama will deliver foreign policy on the debate.

Cynotennial Homecoming presents new traditions

The 100 years of celebration and tradition comes to a conclusion with this year’s Cynotennial Homecoming.

The football team lost to Iowa 20-7 in this year’s first game and did not win a homecoming ball game against rival University of Iowa.

Sharika Soal ‘Got Talent’

TV competition offers audition to Ames singer

By Colton Kinney and Julia Farrell

Sharika “Soal” Song of well-known, now deceased, Indian legend, Laishwari, has been offered the chance to audition for NBC’s show “America’s Got Talent.”

“Talent” - I’ve always wanted to go on a show where I can actually perform,” Soal said. “I don’t have the courage to go on television.”

Getting this opportunity turned out to be fairly simple for Soal. She submitted a video of one of the band’s performances along with a music video.

“Remember the video; it is just us and we’re offering you a jugalband,” Soal said.

Correction:

In our Oct. 6 issue, we published an article about a GSB Executive Initiative Account (EIA) that was reviewed by the General Student Body (GSB) on Thursday, Oct. 4. In that article, we reported that GSB had voted on the funding for the EIA for the 2012-2013 academic year. However, the actual vote did not take place until Friday, Oct. 5. Therefore, the article incorrectly stated that GSB voted on the funding for the EIA.

The Daily regrets the error.

Homecoming is a chance to participate

Homecoming is in the air. The season is falling and the weather is becoming more crisp. This all leads into the homecoming week. It is a time when the Iowa State University community do an excellent job of being involved and very prominent on campus during homecoming week. It is also important to give a microposition to a lot of students who you have that are proud of a club or organization that you are a part of all those fun, and sometimes outrageous events.

That statement is not only false, but it can be detrimental to engaging in the full ISU experience to those who choose to believe it. But homecoming week is much more than the football game; it is homecoming brings to our campus. The energy of Cyclone Nation is beginning to emerge. The pattern of cold and crisp, and the leaves are almost done changing and their colors. It is the time of the year that only come once a year. The organizers claimed that it would be an “ultimate homecoming experience” for the students.

Letters to the editor

Hedens helps us all

When I was a letter in the Daily on October 12th pointing out the name of the State Representatives mentioned. The name was incorrect. I have been a member of the Iowa State University since 1992. My daughter graduated from ISU in 2007, and I have had the pleasure of living and loving ISU for many years. I would like to point out the numerous errors made in the comments I made.

First of all, I would like to point out that the ISU Rep. is not the one I, as a student, would choose to go to for help with any of the mentioned issues. The ISU Rep. is the one that represents the ISU community. I have met with the ISU Rep. and have had the opportunity to discuss my issues with her. I have found her to be very knowledgeable and willing to help.

The second issue I would like to point out is the issue of the ISU Rep. not being present on campus. As a student, I have never had the opportunity to meet with the ISU Rep. on campus. I have not been able to discuss my issues with her on campus. I believe that the ISU Rep. should be present on campus so that students can meet with her on campus. I believe that the ISU Rep. should be present on campus so that students can meet with her on campus.

Finally, I would like to point out that the ISU Rep. is not the one that represents the Ames community. I have met with the Ames Rep. and have had the opportunity to discuss my issues with her. I have found her to be very knowledgeable and willing to help.

The third issue I would like to point out is the issue of the ISU Rep. not being present on campus. As a student, I have never had the opportunity to meet with the ISU Rep. on campus. Execution miscues frustrate Cyclones

By Jake Calhoun

STILLWATER, Okla. — The main question for ISU football after a game-wrecking loss remains: How does much coaching off-field affect your personnel on the field? On Saturday night, the Cyclones were 10-19-1 in pass completions with one touchdown and one interception in a loss that started as quarterback for the 2012 football season.

By Alex Halsted

STILLWATER, Okla. — In a game that was all about control, quarterback Jared Barnett was watched repeatedly as he was forced out of the pocket by Oklahoma State coaches. Barnett said he was manoeuvring out of a pocket that didn’t feel comfortable to him, but he could see the immediate impact on Oklahoma State’s running game.

STILLWATER, Okla. — It was the same old story for the ISU football team on Saturday night at Oklahoma Stadium. The Sooners had the ball and the ball was the ball. But Oklahoma State had the ball and didn’t know where to throw it. The Sooners had the ball and didn’t know what to do.

Offensive end has withstanding success

Still deciding upon what to wear to this weekend’s homecoming game? Here are some tips on how to look your best and have fun.

During the past 100 years, our alumni have sported every style and trend imaginable. Of course, there have been some crimes of fashion along the way and some hair disasters every so often, but some looks have come full circle and can easily look put together at the same time.

You probably won’t find any Iowa State students tailgating with giant flower brooches this fall, but you may find some sporting other looks from the charming 1951 Homecoming Court photo, seen above. But at the natural waist like the one seen at left are a great accessory that can be a touch of sophistication to any look, even tailgating.

It’s safe to say that a lot in the sport of cheerleading has changed over the last six-plus decades, especially the uniforms. This photo, below and left, from 1945 shows three of Iowa State’s cheerleaders sporting knee-length plaid pleated skirts ISU sweaters. The Pep Queen in the middle is even sporting loafers, quite a statement even in this year as many designers from Prada to 3.1 Phillip Lim featured them in their fall collection. Loafers, whether of a 1945 vintage or the new, are extremely versatile and make a stylish addition to any outfit.

Comfort was key for these Yell Like Hell-ers back in 1987, center. Their sweats look paired with high-top sneakers would be considered a bit too much of fleece for today’s standards, but if you’re looking to take the comfy route this Homecoming you could take away something from their get-ups. Pairing an infinity scarf with an oversized crew-neck sweatshirt, leggings, and combat boots is a great way to bring the look to the present day.

Back in 1970, we’re sure no one was calling the fashion police on Gwen Fredrick, the year’s Homecoming Queen, right. However, we suggest that you don’t completely emulate the look this fall. Nonetheless, the double-breasted pea-coat jacket is a classic fall/winter staple piece that you can add to your closet. Peacoats were heavily featured in Kate Spade’s fall 2012 collection. Fredrick might be pleased to know there was even a plaid peacoat in the bunch.

Men, get ready to rock your Canadian tuxedos this fall. Whether it was the 1930s, the ’50s, the ’80s, or the ’90s, jean jackets are a perennial favorite, but they’re coming back more than ever for their 2010s resurgence. However, these aren’t your father’s—or indeed, grandfather’s—jackets. This denim has been updated for today’s Rough-and-Rugged mood with a bit of faux-authentic detailing. However, just don’t wear them to the homecoming dance because your mother never hesitates to point out.

But this time around, there’s nothing cooler than pairing a couple shades of indigo in any look. Dark jeans down below and a light jean jacket above the waist paired with a worn out T-shirt or a flannel and a pair of short boots has all the nonchalance of any rockstar with none of the flashy glam. The everyman staple naturally comes at a price to match, with a basic distressed wash version from American Eagle at only $79.50.

For the risk takers out there, on the other hand, the ever-classic Levi’s makes a solid denim vest, $84.00 at Urban Outfitters, that crosses the line between cross-country trucker grunge and Brooklynite Instagram cool.

Committee finalizes plans for upcoming celebration

By Ashley Hunt

Each year an esteemed Homecoming committee is selected. In 2012, the Iowa State Homecoming committee was announced as the recipients of this honor. It is a favorite event for ISU students and alumni.

This year, Alicia Snyder and Megan Foldes have been selected as this year’s Homecoming general co-chairwomen. The duo has been preparing for nearly a year. After being named general co-chairwomen in November, the two began developing their concepts for what they would like to see at Homecoming 2012.

Snyder and Foldes were both members of the 2011 Homecoming Committee. They enjoyed not only the ability to plan such a huge event, but the knowledge that their ideas would turn into events that people would look forward to.

“When I first applied to be on the committee my freshman year, the idea of being able to plan such a huge event was appealing to me,” said Snyder, junior in interior design.

Both said it was also appealing to be able to do something for the community and to see the community come together not just as 2011 students but as ISU students.

At their first meeting, Snyder was given the role of publicity and Foldes was given the role of development. The committee, consisting of former committee members, the team manager and the official planning was held for the 2012 committee on February 1.

This year’s Homecoming Committee is made up of 26 members. The group is divided into several subcommittees, including team managers for Greekland, an alumni committee, a publicity team, a behind-the-scenes committee, a development team, the committee chair, the committee director, a finance officer, and the committee secretary. The group is led by Megan Foldes Homecoming general co-chairwoman and Alicia Snyder Homecoming general co-chairwoman.

“With the 2011 committee meeting, we were able to utilize that this year,” said Snyder.

This year’s Homecoming committee was led by AISU’s new president. The student was pleased with the feedback he received during the committee meeting.

“The ISU Homecomings have always been at the forefront of ISU Homecomings. To celebrate, the Homecoming Committee has been selling ISU Homecomings at several events including the Iowa State Fair and introductory events held at Iowa State. Our name’s definitely out there this year,” Snyder said.

Homecoming 2012 marks the 100 anniversary of ISU Homecomings. To celebrate, the committee and alumni are calling this year’s celebration the Cytennial Celebration. As an important milestone in the history of ISU Homecomings, new events and changes can be expected this year.

“There’s no way to pinpoint what’s new this year. Foldes said. However, students can expect to see more “bang for their buck” outdoor events and more indoor events.

Snyder and Foldes are excited about the Cytennial Celebration and the idea of sharing their ideas with the community. The Homecoming Committee has been selling ISU Homecomings at several events including the Iowa State Fair and introductory events held at Iowa State. “Our name’s definitely out there this year,” Snyder said.

Homecoming 2013 marks the 100 anniversary of ISU Homecomings. To celebrate, the committee and alumni are calling this year’s celebration the Cytennial Celebration. As an important milestone in the history of ISU Homecomings, new events and changes can be expected this year.

“One of the events at the Cytennial Celebration events. From there, Foldes said they would pass their ideas on to other committees.

“Myself, we just pass our ideas on to the committee on the events, and if they want to plan and turn those ideas into their event,” said Snyder.

The duo also recommends attending the Cytennial Celebration events. "[I’m most excited for] Saturday at the football game," Foldes said. "That will be the most exciting — so there’s really no reason why a student shouldn’t want to attend.

The duo also recommends attending the Friday night Homecoming event at the Alumni Center. It’s a great way to get a feel of what Homecoming traditions, old and new, and to be a part of something bigger than ourselves.

Students who will be involved in the planning of Homecoming 2012, the committee will be accepting applications at the end of October.

Cycennial Homecoming packed with action

Happy 100th anniversary to one very own Iowa State! This year marks Iowa State’s 100th Homecoming since its very first Homecoming celebration in 1912. To mark this special occasion, this year’s Homecoming has been dubbed the Cycennial Celebration.

Lawn displays

Another favorite tradition that surrounds the week that is Homecoming since its very first is the lawn displays. In the past, people have been able to purchase a button for $5. Then, if you showed the button at the Central Campus lunch students are able to purchase Cytennial Celebration. In honor of the 100th Homecoming at Iowa State, this year’s pep rally, usually held on Central Campus, this year’s pep rally will be held at the Iowa State Alumni Center on Beach Avenue. The pep rally begins at 5:30 p.m.

The new tradition is none other than Cy’s life-sized butter sculpture. The competition includes a shirt-like perfor- mance where the students ‘yell like hell’ and act out a story that encompasses the theme of Homecoming and the Cytennial Celebration. This year’s Cytennial sculpture of our favorite mascot, Cy, our ISU mascot. The butter Cy will be created and sculpted by Sarah Prunt, the Cytennial butter sculpture artist. To mark this special occasion, this year’s Homecoming has been dubbed the Cycennial Celebration.

ISU tournaments grow in popularity

Involvement leads to expansion of gold committee

ISU students participate in the 2011 Homecoming basketball tournament. The up-and-coming sport of spike-ball has been added to this year’s cardinal division of tournaments.

Tournaments are bigger than ever for this year’s Homecoming Cyndiana celebration. “We have expanded them more than ever this year,” said Joe Klaes, gold division committee chair. Klaes added that this is the second year tournament expansion has been added, Klaes added that this is the second year tournament expansion has been added, Klaes said.

Students who are not participating in a tournament are encouraged to come and support their greek pairings or other teams. “It isn’t just a game, it’s a Cyclone football victory later that day.” Klaes said.
