The course of the AmesHaunted Forest looks like a normal forest with Halloween props during the day, but when the sun dips into darkness it’s like walking through a nightmare. “There’s not a bad scene in this place,” said Ballard. “We’ll bring in more people right around the time it and it affects that certain person.”

Brothers Lee and Lynn Ballard inherited the family Haunted Forest from their father, a magician, whose love for illusions inspired the core tenants that have scared 500 students and attracted people from the fur reaches of Iowa for 15 years. The haunted attraction business is a $100 million industry. Americans are expected to spend $9.9 billion on Halloween this year, according to the National Retail Federation.

The Ballard’s Haunted Forest is one of the most popular haunted attractions in Iowa, with people coming from all parts of the state for a taste of the fright. This is because the Ballards have a background in sales and promotions. Advertising for the Haunted Forest can be found in 170 County’s General Stores at 40 to 50 miles from Ames. Most Halloween attractions are unable to advertise on the Haunted Forest. “They’ll hit it in the first year and maybe break even,” Ballard said. “If the rumor comes out that you’re not any good, you’re dead.”

Some fear an acre is a fact for false evidence appearing real, and the actors can put people’s fear to imagine a scare scene.

“There’s a lot of people who get scared out, and that’s what they’re looking for,” Ballard said.

Ballard frequents haunted house conventions and garage sales to collect anything that can be used for scenes. From something as simple as mannequins that can be spread across the forest to make walkers visibly frightened. Perhaps the most mind-bending set piece at the Haunted Forest is a $15,000 tornado turned. The tunnel is a walkway that runs through a spinning kaleidoscope. Anyone walking through will hang on to the rail as if the walkway is spinning, even though they aren’t moving at all.

But Ballard said it’s the actors who keep the Haunted Forest running. “The actors are the ones that make this thing work,” Ballard said. “We get performers that want to do it and they get the ones that make the place super fun.”

Anyone 18 and older can join the crew to entail the Haunted Forest. No acting experience is required — just enthusiasm and an active imagination. Anyone coming to work in the forest and they find the scenes that the actors find themselves, put down, and turn to the next.

Political gap steadily increases

By Anthony Wolford

ISU students and staff can tune a little bit into what the Ames City Council has to offer in the future. The ISU Horticulture Research Station conducts research on more than 90 projects annually, according to the website. All of these projects are made possible through ISU student donations.

Sheltites, as Ames community members, are privileged to be able to enjoy the many funds that are raised on campus. The ISU Horticulture Research Station can also be considered a part of the Ames City Council due to its location off campus. The research station is an important aspect of what it means to be an ISU student, as its donation year is over 100 years.

With one or two labs studying the same subject roughly, ISU helps its students prepare for a future in the industry. By working on research projects, students in the field will be better prepared for the work that they will do in the future. Students who are majoring in agriculture and/or horticulture are able to gain the necessary experience by working on these projects. The research and development that is done at the station will help students see the courses they are taking in real life.

“The cool thing about having this research is that we can actually use the research and development that is going on in the real world and find out how successful the projects are and we can use that knowledge to improve the products that we are growing,” said Nathan Nolte, research technician at the Horticulture Research Station.

ISU students and staff work long hours to ensure that the research is successful. The research of the station is funded by donations made by the Ames community, which ultimately helps students see the courses they are taking in real life. The research that is done on campus is also used to help students see the courses they are taking in real life and ensure that the students are prepared for the real world.

A gender gap is defined as a difference in pay between men and women, which is also in need of funding in the Midwest after an unexplained decline since 1964, according to a study done by Rutgers’ Gender Gap Research Station. The study shows that men are more likely to be engaged in the political process than women are. Although women are more likely to be engaged in the political process, they are not as likely to be active in the political process as men are.

“Students should get involved in the political process because they have a unique opportunity to make a difference,” said Jared Ingram, junior in Business Administration. “Students should get involved in the political process because they have a unique opportunity to make a difference.”

Karen Kaufmann, associate professor of Women’s and Gender Studies, said the political process should be considered by all students, regardless of their political views. “We need to get people engaged in the political process, and that can happen by getting people involved in the political process.”

The purpose of the cultural night will be to encourage students to be more conscious of the arts and culture in the community. The event will include a variety of cultural programs, support groups, and other cultural activities. The event will be held on campus and will be open to the public. The event will feature a variety of cultural programs, including music, dance, poetry, and visual arts.

“I see this Democratic trend persisting, if not increasing, in the future. With republicans, several high points have shown how successful they can be,” said Karen Kaufmann, junior in Business Administration.

on Republican debate
University political science professor

In his opinion piece, "Quiet" Steffen Schmidt, a knowledgeable University professor, provides insights into the Republican debate.

He explores the importance of the debate and discusses the performance of various candidates. Schmidt highlights the significance of the debate in determining the course of the election and the dynamics among the candidates.

Schmidt emphasizes the role of the debate in shaping strategies and positioning for the campaign. He shares his analysis of the candidates' performances, focusing on their strengths and weaknesses.

Schmidt concludes by reflecting on the broader implications of the debate for the Republican party's prospects in the upcoming elections. His critique offers valuable perspectives for understanding the debate's impact on the political landscape.

The analysis provided by Schmidt underscores the critical role of the Republican debate in defining the contours of the campaign and setting the stage for the remainder of the election season. His perspectives are enlightening and offer valuable insights for those following the political developments closely.

Schmidt's insights provide a nuanced understanding of the debate's significance and the candidates' performances. His observations contribute to a deeper comprehension of the Republican party's standing in the race and the implications for the future of the presidential campaign.

In summary, Schmidt's letter provides a thoughtful analysis of the Republican debate, offering valuable perspectives on the candidates' performances and the broader implications for the election. His insights enrich the understanding of the debate's role in shaping the campaign and informing the political landscape.

Mayday Parade to rock Wooly’s

ByAndi.Schieszler

Mayday Parade will headline Wooly’s show Friday night alongside Real Friends, This Wild Life and As It Is. Tickets for the show are currently available online.

Lenzo said Mayday Parade was brought to the United States for the AP Tour. “We are getting older and want people to give it another chance. We’re not the band that people remember, but we’re the band that ever gets to play in the United States,” Lenzo said.

Carichner said he wants people to give the band another chance.

Mayday Parade started in 2007 and has released seven studio albums, one full-length album and EP in 2011. Real Friends, This Wild Life and As It Is will support Mayday Parade.

For more information about the tour, please visit the band’s Facebook page.

Norah Jones, an original, mellower jazz singer, will perform at 9 p.m. Friday at Stephens Auditorium. Tickets for the concert are available now on Ticketmaster. Tickets are also available at the Iowa State Center between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. Monday through Friday. Prices range from $29.50 to $65.

Jones is easily recognized for her song “Come Away With Me,” which was re-released in 2002. It was certified multi-platinum and won eight Grammy Awards in 2003.

Since then, Jones has worked on multiple albums, winning many awards, and becoming a household name in the music industry. Jones is known for her ability to collaborate with a wide variety of artists, as well as her original sound that is reminiscent of crooners from the early Jazz Age.

Jones’ concert will showcase a variety of music, from old hits to songs from her most recent albums. Jones will play a setlist that changes every night.

The concert is part of a national tour and will take place on Octubaween, the festival created by the euphonium ensemble Octubaween, which is one of the most unique Octubaween festivals in the country.

For more information, go to Jones’ website and Iowa State Center’s website.
When shopping for an engagement ring, it is crucial to observe the cut, clarity, color and carat. The cut is of utmost importance because it dictates how light enters the diamond and creates the brilliance. The second factor to consider is the clarity, which is the absence of inclusions in the stone. The color of a diamond should be colorless, with slightly yellow or brown ones being more common. The carat weight refers to the size of the diamond; a larger carat weight means a higher price.

The next thing to consider is the setting, which is the design on the top of the band. The basket setting, which is more common, consists of prongs that hold up the diamond. Other options include a channel or a bezel setting. The prongs should be strong enough to hold up the diamond but not so strong that the diamond is not visible, and the bezel setting should be smooth to prevent snagging or scratching. The metal used to make the band can be gold, white gold, platinum or palladium. Each metal has its own characteristics, with gold being the most affordable and palladium being the most rare.

The final factor to consider is the cost of the ring. The cost of a ring can vary greatly depending on the quality of the diamond, the metal used, the setting and the design. It is essential to keep a budget in mind and to shop around to find a ring that fits within your price range.

When shopping for a ring, it is crucial to keep in mind that there is no one-size-fits-all solution. Each person has their unique preferences, and what works for one person may not work for another. It is important to take your time and to consider all of your options before making a decision. Ultimately, the most important thing is to choose a ring that you love and that represents your love and commitment to your partner.

Anna Kuuttila is a graduate senior who came to the team after taking a year off of collegiate tennis and wanting to get involved again. She has shown her experience and talents early with a 7-1 record, making a solid case for the top spot.

“I feel like everyone is playing really well right now,” Kuuttila said. “I know I had a good last tournament, but so did a lot of others. It really couldn’t tell you who would go where in our lineup now, so we will see how it shakes out in Daytona.”

The quick turnaround from Drake to Daytona will be a physical and mental test for the Cyclones. Between its first and second tournament, the team was given an entire month to rest. This time, it only has three days.

“It’s going to be a great test for us,” Kuuttila said. “Of course we’re tired, but we get a couple months to rest before the regular season, so it’s a great chance to go out on a positive note.”
