“Bowl projections” are in terms of offers. Approaching representatives from Boise State and Utah State, which are both ranked 19 in the polls, have yet to re- mit any response to a point.

Of those four bowls, this game seems to make the most sense. Boise State already has good attendance to bowl games as it, but since there are 10 Distress from the state of Texas, this would only increase the team’s chances at leaving the mother-land unscathed.

Meineke Car Care Bowl of Texas: (Big 12 No. 6)

2012—4 p.m. CST, Dec. 26

Projected opponent: Purdue (Big Ten 6)

Purdue to Iowa State: Athens

Formerly known as the Houston Bowl, the Meineke Car Care Bowl of Texas is in the orbit for Iowa State to claim a bowl projection.

Bowl 2012—12:25 p.m. CST, Dec. 28

Wildcats

Independence Bowl – Shreveport, La., 1 p.m. CST, Dec. 28

The crazy Independence Bowl is al- ways a wild card. Representatives from Independence Bowl were in the running for Iowa State’s season finale against Notre Dame.

Music City Bowl — Nashville, Tenn., 11 a.m. CST, Dec. 31

Iowa State could scare up one of the Atlantic Coast Conference’s bids as an at-large selection of Oklahoma State to secure another bowl bid for the Sugar Bowl.

Military Bowl — Washington, D.C., 2 p.m. CST, Dec. 31

Sampson opened with a 39-yard field goal, a score from either the Big Ten or MAC would con- siderably tilt the tilt.

Prediction: Heart of Dallas Bowl

Call a hunch, but the Heart of Dallas Bowl seems like the most logical choice to give Iowa State a bowl chance.

One major positive for Iowa State is its tie to Texas Tech, both states have been known to come good attendance for the bowl games in the past.

With 10 players leaving from the state of Texas, that is a step closer for the Aggies family will likely compel the Heart of Dallas Bowl to consider Iowa State.

Any uncertainty aside, the Heart of Dallas Bowl will likely destination for Iowa State at the point.

Banning horse meat no help

By Phil Brown

The last horse slaughterhouses in the United States closed in 2007. But a new study of the humane treatment of horses shows that the practice of horse slaughter is not just a matter of animal rights. Slaughter of horses is a real problem with horse slaughtering in the United States.

The study, which was published in the Journal of Animal Science, found that horses in the United States are mistreated. The study found that horses in the United States are mistreated. The study also found that horses in the United States are mistreated.

Would legalizing all drugs be a good idea?

In the article “Should We Legalize Drugs?” written by NPR staff those arguing for the motion, included Paul Butler, criminal law scholar and professor at Georgetown University Law Center, and Nick Gillespie, the founder of the libertarian magazine Reason. Those arguing against the motion included the former chief of the Drug Enforcement Administration, Asa Hutchinson, and Theodore Dalrymple, retired prison doctor and psychiatrist. The motion’s argument which is consistent, they recognize it doesn’t do anyone any good to legislate alcohol.

And to be consistent in your philosophy of libertarianism, you have to legalize all drugs. Food and drugs are legal, why not drugs? Why not legalizing marijuana in Washington or Colorado? What was the reasoning for legalizing alcohol? To prevent people from using drugs. Does it work? No, it’s not a single dimension across the country has ever found a way to prevent people from using drugs, or at least to get drugs off the street, but it’s all we’ve got. So nation has one-quarter of the world’s population and 25 percent of the world’s prisoners. Line change

DEFINITION: A line change is a made-up decision of a group of friends. The friends would make up one, two, or three categories of friends and go to a bar that none of them had been to before and call the bar one of the categories. The bar would then order a line change, which would then be called a:...

Hilton Coliseum earning a reputation for volleyball

For the second consecutive season, Iowa State will be hosting the NCAA tournament’s first and second round.

Coliseum and the ISU volleyball fan base, there is a certain curiosity from the person she is talking to and what makes Hilton Coliseum special to volleyball.

“We now have a reputation as being one of the best places to play the country,” Johnson-Lynch said. “That’s what really excites our people. I think when, in the announcements come out, we’re disappointed that they didn’t pick a site in Iowa that get to come to Iowa State and play before the match [against Texas],” he said.

In DIT Theatre’s latest production of “Alice in Wonderland,” imagination is key. The play is an adaptation of Lewis Carroll’s classic story, and the version was written by the show’s director, Matt Foss. But unlike most productions of the show, Foss has chosen to use larger-than-life puppets to represent some off-the-wall Wonderland characters.

“Because of the nature of the play, we needed a bit of flexibility,” Foss said. “Ruthless baking, no! [as in, we could cover a lot of distance in] the play, we thought this was a great way to do it.”

The production team also decided to use the large puppets completely out of “trash” materials. Famous monsters, child football and space-aged tea cups are only a few of the items used to create some of the characters. Kathleen Hall, seen in performing arts, falls through the rabbit hole during an “Alice in Wonderland” dress rehearsal Tuesday in Fisher Theater.

In early drafts of the Back to the Future script, the time machine was built out of an old refrigerato:

Golf courses in America take up as much land space as Rhode Island and Delaware combined.

The average life span of a Major League Baseball is 7 pitches.

Three months after Charlie Chaplin died his corpse was stolen by two Swiss mechanics in order to extort money from the family. The robbers were captured and Chaplin’s body was found eleven weeks later. To prevent further attempts, he was rebury under concrete.

Oddly enough, the very first high heels were made for soldiers in the 1500s who needed a way to keep their feet snugly tucked into their stirrups while riding on horseback.

Al Capone’s business card reportedly said he was a furniture salesman.
