Into the Spotlight
Meet New Friends

Over 11,000 Cyclones call us home. Students who live on campus have higher GPAs, report being more involved and are more likely to graduate from Iowa State than their peers who live off campus.

We’re dedicated to helping students succeed!
Games to watch
Turn here to see what specific games we pick as our biggest matchups of the season. Remember Kansas last year? We think you’ll want to make sure to be in attendance this year.

Hallie Christofferson
Through most of Hallie Christofferson’s basketball career, she’s played behind bigger names like Chelsea Poppens and Kelsey Bolte. This year, she steps into the spotlight.

Team rosters
After a lot of roster turnover, the men’s and women’s teams both feature several new players. Check out who is expected to start and who is new to cardinal and gold.

Melvin Ejim
Last year the Toronto native was an underrated piece playing behind the five senior transfers. This year, the Big 12’s double-double leader steps to center stage.

Coach Q&A’s
Both Bill Fennelly and Fred Hoiberg have gained a reputation as two of the best in the Big 12. Read here what they expect moving forward into this 2013 basketball season.

Impact freshmen
The men’s and women’s team have brought in consensus top-100 freshmen. Find out more about Matt Thomas, Monte Morris and Jadda Buckley.
GAMES TO WATCH

Men’s

Michigan

Michigan lost Trey Burke and Tim Hardaway Jr. to the NBA. But Mitch McGary and Glenn Robinson III also could have gone to the NBA yet opted to stay. Nik Stauskas and his 44 percent from 3-point returns to a potent Michigan attack.

Kansas

Everyone remembers last year’s two games: the Ben McLemore bank-in 3-pointer and the Georges Niang block under the hoop. Let’s be honest: You won’t want to miss a national title contender featuring the best prospect in the entire country, Andrew Wiggins.

Women’s

Oklahoma

The Sooners enter the season as the Big 12 coaches’ pick to win the league and ranked No. 14 in the USA Today Coaches Poll. Iowa State beat Oklahoma three times last season, including a second round win by the Cyclones in the Big 12 tournament.

Baylor

Iowa State will take on Baylor at home for its last regular-season game. Baylor was picked to finish second in the Big 12 this season. The Cyclones lost to the Bears 75-47 in Big 12 championship game last year. Baylor graduated the conference’s leading scorer in Brittney Griner, but the preseason Big 12 player of the year, Odyssey Sims, will return.

Shop for exclusive men’s and women’s licensed apparel from:

• Cutter & Buck
• Barbarian Rugbywear
• Pressbox

Moorman CLOTHIERS

Downtown, Ames • 515-232-3261 or 888-326-2060

323 Main Street
Ames Iowa
515.232.2235

TheSalonInAmes.com
M-F. 8 AM - 8AM
S. 9 AM - 4PM

Smashbox COSMETICS
makeup services

Bumble and Bumble
hair products

Aloxxi
hair color

Students and Faculty enjoy 20% off all services with ISU ID or Alumni Association Card
 ALUMNI with membership card enjoy 20% off services AND products during Homecoming Week **
When the phrase “actions speak louder than words” is used, it is probably being used to describe Hallie Christofferson.

Relatively soft-spoken, the 6-foot-3-inch senior on the ISU women’s basketball team would rather step onto the floor at Hilton Coliseum and play in front of the thousands of fans and show them what she can do, than tell them about it.

As long as she is in an ISU uniform and making shots, ISU coach Bill Fennelly doesn’t care if...
Bill Fennelly speaks with then-sophomore Hallie Christofferson during the 2012 game against Kansas State. The following season as a junior, Christofferson would become a unanimous All-Big 12 First Team selection.

“EVERY PLAY WE RUN, the first option is for her. Every play if we can do something off of that, we will, BUT THAT’S WHERE YOU’VE GOT TO START.”
— BILL FENNELLY

she says a word. He even joked she would finish with more points than words spoken in her career.

But that’s fine; he can do the talking for her.

“I joke that we could practice in the library because we’re so quiet,” Fennelly said. “I don’t like it, but that’s the way it is. I think [Hallie’s] communication is more what’s going on in [the locker room] than on the court. She’ll walk up to Nikki [Moody] and say call this play.

“It’s not a rah-rah-let’s-go kind of thing.”

Following a breakout junior season in which Christofferson was a unanimous All-Big 12 First Team selection, she led the Cyclones in field-goal percentage (.516), 3-point percentage (.401), free-throw percentage (.862) and points per game (15.6), a new task is ahead of her.

After playing alongside former players like Chelsea Poppens and Anna Prins for the first three years, Christofferson will now have to step into the spotlight. Being the new face of the team is a process she doesn’t think will happen right away, but she has been able to learn from the examples of Poppens and Prins.

“I don’t really try to put much on myself, because if I think about it too much, then I’m just going to think about it too much and not play well,” Christofferson said of the pressure this season. “So I’ll just go out every game and every practice with a clear mind, just looking forward and trying to have fun with my teammates.”

In Iowa State’s practices, Fennelly runs a drill. If the offense doesn’t score on the current possession, the team will have to run or will have to wait another possession to take a break.

Whenever that drill comes up in practices, there is only one place the ball seems to go in Fennelly’s mind: Christofferson in her No. 5 jersey.

Fennelly’s challenge to Christofferson in those situations isn’t having her make an open shot.

The real challenge comes when Christofferson finds herself under duress when shooting and making the tough shots when her team needs her to, instead of passing along the duty to someone else. Through the beginning of her senior campaign, Christofferson has accepted the responsibility of being the one her teammates look to.

“Every play we run, the first option is for her. Every play,” Fennelly said of Christofferson. “If we can do something off of that, we will, but that’s where you’ve got to start. The good thing about it is our players understand that; they believe in her and trust her; and she’s earned that over four years. That didn’t happen her first year; it took awhile.

“Now it’s her turn to be that kind of person.”

Christofferson’s hometown of Hamlin, Iowa, is a small one, with roughly 252 residents. Christofferson went to high school in Exira, where she starred and led her team to a 26-0 record her senior year. She was also captain of the Class 1A all-tournament team as well as its MVP as a senior.

Leading her team and being the face of a squad is nothing new to Christofferson, just the setting has changed.

After seeing Christofferson
Hallie Christofferson brings the ball down the court in the 83-68 win against Kansas on Feb. 27 at Hilton Coliseum. Christofferson went to high school in Exira, where she led her team to a 26-0 record her senior year.

Monday, Nov. 11, 2013 | Iowa State Daily | HOOPS | 7

Score her 2,000th high school point with his wife Deb, Fennelly was asked a question.

“You think she can handle the Big 12?” Deb said after watching Christofferson’s performance.

Throughout her career at Iowa State, Fennelly has been able to see why he thought she could play in the Big 12 not only by her stats, but by her work ethic. Whether it is on the court, in the classroom or in the community, Fennelly notices how hard Christofferson works to make herself better.

It is something her teammates have picked up on, too.

“A lot of people in that situation, if they had the whole program on their back — she does that and school and everything and maintains that and is a really good role model for the community as well as doing what she needs to on the court,” said junior guard Brynn Williamson. “That’s really good for her, and it’s really for our program. It gives everyone something to look up to.”

In her 86 games as a starter for the Cyclones, Christofferson has stayed true to her quiet demeanor. But in Iowa State’s exhibition opener against Wayne State on Nov. 3, the Cyclones were up 11 points with 14:53 left in the game, Nicole “Kidd” Blaskowsky had just committed a foul.

Christofferson took the opportunity to huddle her team in the paint. She called out to Blaskowsky, Jadda Buckley, Williamson and Seanna Johnson to huddle up. She preached defensive intensity, realizing the opportunity to teach the younger players.

Although she isn’t much of a talker, she’ll be able to communicate in a way that works for her and the rest of the team.

Christofferson might still end up with more points than words spoken in her ISU career, but that is something Fennelly and the rest of the team can certainly live with.
MEN’S BASKETBALL LINEUP

No. 3 Melvin Ejim
Melvin Ejim jumps into his senior season as a preseason All-Big 12 selection. The Toronto native finished last season with a Big 12-high of 15 double-doubles, averaging 11 points and nine rebounds per game, earning him Big 12 All-Third honors. Ejim was also a preseason selection for the Senior CLASS award. Ejim sustained a left knee injury on Oct. 30 in practice. He will be sidelined four-to-six weeks.

No. 22 Dustin Hogue
Dustin Hogue transferred from Indian Hills Community College after a sophomore season where he averaged 12.9 points and 5.4 rebounds in 25 games. He also made nearly 50 percent of his shots and was named to the All-Region XI Second Team for his effort. His Indian Hills squad finished seventh at the NJCAA Division I national tournament in 2012.

No. 31 Georges Niang
Georges Niang burst onto the scene and began starting for his team in 23 games. He finished his year named to the Big 12 All-Rookie team, averaging 14 points and nearly five rebounds per game while shooting more than 50 percent from the field. Niang was the No. 56 player in the country, according to ESPN.com. The 6-foot-7-inch forward stretched the floor last season, hitting 38 3-pointers, third most by a freshman in ISU history.

No. 21 Matt Thomas
The Onalaska, Wis., native is considered one of the best pure shooters in the 2013 class, ranking as a consensus top-100 recruit. Thomas averaged 28 points per game in his senior year and made 36 percent of his 3-pointers. The 6-foot-4-inch guard is expected to log big minutes and replace a chunk of the outside shooting that was lost with the departure of 278 3-pointers from last year.

No. 50 DeAndre Kane
DeAndre Kane was a late transfer addition after he graduated from Marshall University. Kane is only one of three active D1 players to average 15 points each of his first three seasons. Kane averaged 15.7 points and seven assists in his junior year and was named to the C-USA All-Conference Team for the third time in his career, earning second-team awards his junior year.

WOMEN’S BASKETBALL LINEUP

No. 11 Jadda Buckley
Jadda Buckley comes to the ISU basketball squad as a consensus top-50 recruit out of Mason City, Iowa. She was the ninth-rated point guard in her class by ESPN.com. In high school, Buckley broke her school’s record for career 3-pointers with 131 at a 43 percent rate, and during her senior year, she averaged 14 points, 4.4 rebounds and 3.8 steals per game.

No. 5 Hallie Christofferson
Last season, the senior forward from Hamlin, Iowa, started all 33 games for Iowa State. She averaged 15.6 points per game, good enough the lead the Cyclones in scoring last year. Christofferson was a unanimous All-Big 12 first team selection and was an AP All-American Honorable Mention. She is one of three ISU seniors this season.

No. 4 Nikki Moody
Last season, the Euless, Texas, native averaged 8.4 points and 7.4 assists per game. She led the Big 12 and was third nationally in assists last year, finishing the season with 238 total assists. Her freshman year she set the record for assists as a rookie with 133. Moody started 31 games for the Cyclones during her sophomore year and was named to the Honorable Mention All-Big 12 list.

No. 12 Seanna Johnson
Seanna Johnson is a freshman guard form Brooklyn Park, Minn. During her senior year in high school, Johnson averaged 18.7 points and 11 rebounds. She was ranked No. 72 in her recruiting class by All-Star Girls Report. Johnson is also the only player in Minnesota state history to earn five All-Tournament team honors at the state tournament.

No. 22 Brynn Williamson
Williamson averaged 8.3 points and 4.5 rebounds per game last year and was considered the team’s best perimeter defender. Her 35 percent clip from behind the 3-point line ranked her No. 3 in the Big 12 last year. She enters her junior season with more than 100 made 3-pointers in her career and made at least one trey in every game last season.

BENCH

MEN’S BASKETBALL LINEUP

No. 3 Melvin Ejim
Melvin Ejim jumps into his senior season as a preseason All-Big 12 selection. The Toronto native finished last season with a Big 12-high of 15 double-doubles, averaging 11 points and nine rebounds per game, earning him Big 12 All-Third honors. Ejim was also a preseason selection for the Senior CLASS award. Ejim sustained a left knee injury on Oct. 30 in practice. He will be sidelined four-to-six weeks.

No. 22 Dustin Hogue
Dustin Hogue transferred from Indian Hills Community College after a sophomore season where he averaged 12.9 points and 5.4 rebounds in 25 games. He also made nearly 50 percent of his shots and was named to the All-Region XI Second Team for his effort. His Indian Hills squad finished seventh at the NJCAA Division I national tournament in 2012.

No. 31 Georges Niang
Georges Niang burst onto the scene and began starting for his team in 23 games. He finished his year named to the Big 12 All-Rookie team, averaging 14 points and nearly five rebounds per game while shooting more than 50 percent from the field. Niang was the No. 56 player in the country, according to ESPN.com. The 6-foot-7-inch forward stretched the floor last season, hitting 38 3-pointers, third most by a freshman in ISU history.

No. 21 Matt Thomas
The Onalaska, Wis., native is considered one of the best pure shooters in the 2013 class, ranking as a consensus top-100 recruit. Thomas averaged 28 points per game in his senior year and made 36 percent of his 3-pointers. The 6-foot-4-inch guard is expected to log big minutes and replace a chunk of the outside shooting that was lost with the departure of 278 3-pointers from last year.

No. 50 DeAndre Kane
DeAndre Kane was a late transfer addition after he graduated from Marshall University. Kane is only one of three active D1 players to average 15 points each of his first three seasons. Kane averaged 15.7 points and seven assists in his junior year and was named to the C-USA All-Conference Team for the third time in his career, earning second-team awards his junior year.

WOMEN’S BASKETBALL LINEUP

No. 11 Jadda Buckley
Jadda Buckley comes to the ISU basketball squad as a consensus top-50 recruit out of Mason City, Iowa. She was the ninth-rated point guard in her class by ESPN.com. In high school, Buckley broke her school’s record for career 3-pointers with 131 at a 43 percent rate, and during her senior year, she averaged 14 points, 4.4 rebounds and 3.8 steals per game.

No. 5 Hallie Christofferson
Last season, the senior forward from Hamlin, Iowa, started all 33 games for Iowa State. She averaged 15.6 points per game, good enough the lead the Cyclones in scoring last year. Christofferson was a unanimous All-Big 12 first team selection and was an AP All-American Honorable Mention. She is one of three ISU seniors this season.

No. 4 Nikki Moody
Last season, the Euless, Texas, native averaged 8.4 points and 7.4 assists per game. She led the Big 12 and was third nationally in assists last year, finishing the season with 238 total assists. Her freshman year she set the record for assists as a rookie with 133. Moody started 31 games for the Cyclones during her sophomore year and was named to the Honorable Mention All-Big 12 list.

No. 12 Seanna Johnson
Seanna Johnson is a freshman guard form Brooklyn Park, Minn. During her senior year in high school, Johnson averaged 18.7 points and 11 rebounds. She was ranked No. 72 in her recruiting class by All-Star Girls Report. Johnson is also the only player in Minnesota state history to earn five All-Tournament team honors at the state tournament.

No. 22 Brynn Williamson
Williamson averaged 8.3 points and 4.5 rebounds per game last year and was considered the team’s best perimeter defender. Her 35 percent clip from behind the 3-point line ranked her No. 3 in the Big 12 last year. She enters her junior season with more than 100 made 3-pointers in her career and made at least one trey in every game last season.

BENCH

2 Abdel Nader
4 Sherron Dorsey-Walker
11 Monte Morris
12 Kourtlin Jackson
15 Naz Long
23 K.J. Bluford
24 Percy Gibson
33 Tyler Ellerman
42 Daniel Edozie

2 Lexi Albrecht
15 “Kidd” Blaskowsky
23 Ashley Hagedorn
24 Elly Arganbright
32 Fallon Ellis
34 Madison Baier
35 Jordan Jensen
EJIM’S EMERGENCE

The ISU senior steps forward with ‘something to prove’ after 3 years playing under the radar

File: Jonathan Krueger/Iowa State Daily
“I just take it for what it is and still go out with a chip on my shoulder. I’ve got something to PROVE.”

— MELVIN EJIM

By Dean.Berhow-Goll
@iowastatedaily.com

It is Oct. 10 and media day for ISU men’s basketball. All of Iowa’s media is at the Sukup Basketball Complex to ask Fred Hoiberg a question or two and try to unfold the question of how this team will replace 52 points, 17 rebounds and 12 assists per game. Not to mention 278 or 346 3-pointers and five fifth-year seniors, four of which are playing at the next level.

After Hoiberg’s nearly 20-minute feeding frenzy with the media, it is now the players’ turns.

“Can we get Melvin,” asks a reporter. But he’s doing TV, then radio, then a phone interview and photos after that.

There isn’t enough Melvin Ejim to go around. Everyone wants a chance to talk with the preseason All-Big 12 selection.

But it wasn’t always that way. Melvin Ejim wasn’t always in the spotlight.

Melvin Ejim wasn’t a highly prized recruit. Or at least as a recruit he wasn’t expected to lead a major conference in multiple statistical categories.

Just a three-star recruit, the Toronto native arrived in Ames by way of the Brewster Academy and was only recruited by a handful of Big East schools with Iowa State being the only Big 12 school to send Ejim an offer, which he accepted nothing himself as the fifth recruit in Hoiberg’s first class. Now he’s the only one left on the roster.

Ejim started flying under the radar right away his freshman year. Mostly overshadowed by the return of The Mayor, the ascension of Diante Garrett and a year packed with close losses in Big 12 play, his 10 points and 6.7 rebounds per game went virtually unnoticed.

His second season was even more in the dark with the arrival of Royce White on Hilton’s hardwood. The polarizing player, who drew waves of national media, led Iowa State in every statistical category and later declared for the NBA Draft.

Ejim continued with another workmanlike nine points and six rebounds per game, earning him Big 12 Honorable Mention honors while starting on Iowa State’s first NCAA tournament appearance since 2005, dethroning defending champion UConn in the first round and losing to a buzz saw in Anthony Davis and eventual champion Kentucky.

His junior year, Ejim took leaps and bounds as a matchup nightmare for other teams. While other teams game planned for Iowa State’s nationally feared offensive blitzkrieg, the 6-foot-6-inch Ejim was too physically gifted to put a guard on, but too agile and quick to put a big body on him.

“It’s always about going out with a chip on your shoulder and always going out and proving yourself,” Ejim said.

Where was Ejim? Hidden behind the scoring ability of Will Clyburn, following Chris Babb’s leadership, on the receiving end of a Korie Lucious flashy dime or capped out beneath the hoop boxing out for a Tyrus McGee rainbow 3-pointer.

He was always perfectly hidden in plain sight.

He even led the Big 12 in double-doubles, racking up 15 and averaged 11.3 points and nine rebounds earning him third team All-Big 12 honors. He was even the first ISU player to lead the Big 12 in rebounding in a decade.

Now Ejim and his preseason All-Big 12 selection head into the 2013-14 season as the only senior — along with the newly transferred DeAndre Kane — on a roster full of talented underclassmen.

His head coach recalled when he was heading into his senior year, with the weight of a program on his shoulders and the possibility of the next level in his future, and said he believes Ejim can handle it the way he did all those
Melvin Ejim, right, celebrates after then-teammate Scott Christopherson hits a 3-point try in the second half of Iowa State’s 65-61 win over Kansas State in February 2012.

Melvin Ejim, right, celebrates after then-teammate Scott Christopherson hits a 3-point try in the second half of Iowa State's 65-61 win over Kansas State in February 2012.

“I remember as a player the expectations and the pressure of going into your senior year, your future is right in your face,” Hoiberg said. “You just can’t go out there and press. You have to be who you are and Melvin’s done that.

“He’s our best leader, our best communicator out there, and I expect Melvin to have a great senior season.”

Ejim has bided his time for this season. A year that’s been three years in the making. The time is here when Melvin Ejim steps out from the shadows and firmly entrenches himself into the spotlight.

“I still have to go out and prove it and work hard and do what I do,” Ejim said. “I just take it for what it is and still go out with a chip on my shoulder.

“I’ve got something to prove.”

Now Ejim is back at media day in the Sukup Basketball Complex. He’s done three TV interviews, maybe more, a phone interview, a radio interview and photo shoots.

But the media isn’t done with the new face of Iowa State’s basketball team. He’s got one last photo shoot before he can join the rest of his team back in the locker room.

He walks past a few of his teammates after their team picture with the coaches, graduate assistants and managers, over to the corner of the gym for the photo shoot.

The photographer bounces him a basketball to pose with.

Ejim steps in front of the lights and looks into the camera.

“OK, are you ready?” asks the photographer.

“Yeah let’s do this,” Ejim says.
The ISU women's basketball team had not experienced much success in its history until Bill Fennelly took the reins as head coach in 1995. Since then, the team has exploded into the national spotlight making 16 postseason appearances, 14 of those in the NCAA tournament.

With more than 500 career head coaching wins and multiple nominations as coach of the year, Fennelly has been regarded as one of the best coaches in collegiate women's basketball. He has received a lifetime contract to coach at Iowa State and enters his 19th season as the Cyclones' head coach.

The schedule this season sets up for some exciting home games against in-state rivals and a season finale against Baylor. How important is home court advantage in those big games?

It's important in college sports in general, especially basketball, because we have such an amazing fanbase. Hilton Magic is real. The fans are tremendous; we have the most loyal student body in the country. ... Women's basketball is not a thing that a lot of students follow, but we usually get a pretty good following. You want teams to not want to walk down that ramp into Hilton. If you are not really, really good at home, you're not going to be very good.

Jada Buckley is the most highly-touted recruit in recent history. What is special about her that other players don't have?

I think there are two freshman you will hear about a lot, both Jadda and Seanna [Johnson]. Jadda is a kid from Iowa; a lot of the fans have known about her forever because she committed to us a long time ago. She's dynamic with the ball; she can defend; she’s a lot bigger and stronger than she looks, and a kid that is going to be a great player. But both her and Seanna, we have two freshman that are really going to be great players. They are going to play critical minutes at critical times, and as our team grows sometimes, you worry about relying on freshman to play key roles but I really don’t with them.

One of the biggest changes from last season is the team size. With nine possible guards on the roster, will this team depend on more 3-point shooting and perimeter play?

I don’t know know if we will shoot a lot more 3s than before because we have always shot a lot of them. I think when you say you are going to play more guards, people think you will shoot more 3s. But in the past, our post players have shot a lot of them, too. We just need to make more. Our percentage was somewhere in the 60s nationally, and that number needs to go up with the talent we have out there. I think we’ve been averaging around 25 3s a game, and I don’t see that number going up too much.

What is your coaching style in practice? Do you get in there and play with the girls?

Oh, I’m too old for that. My playing days are over. [laughs] No, we are into every play. I’ve always believed that if you want the players to be engaged every play, one of the things we talk about is every play needs to be finished and any player can start something, you just have to be special to finish. The coaches are into every play, we are working hard to coach, to motivate, to teach. Early in the year it’s harder, practices are longer, there is a lot of new stuff, a lot of stuff that isn’t necessarily fun. The energy level in the building is high, so hopefully whatever we do here, we can do it in [Hilton].

If you, Paul Rhoads and Fred Hoiberg ran for mayor, who would have the best campaign and who would win?

Well, Fred would win because he’s already got the local vote tied up. I think Paul would have a better chance of winning a statewide election, like a United States senator because he has more of the national appeal right now. And I think I’d probably be dog-catcher or something. I’d hopefully get a place in their cabinet or support staff, that would be my goal.
As ISU coach Fred Hoiberg enters his fourth season at the helm of the Cyclones, his team will take on a completely new look. After losing the bulk of its contributors from last season’s NCAA tournament team, the Cyclones have eight players who will don ISU uniforms for the first time ever during the 2013-14 season.

The long list of new players includes transfers and freshmen. Guard DeAndre Kane will play his senior season for the Cyclones after transferring from Marshall and true freshmen Matt Thomas and Monte Morris are expected to be key contributors, too.

With DeAndre Kane, do you envision him playing mostly the point or is it a situation where some of the younger guys can press to the point where you can move them around?

He’ll play both. He’ll play with the ball in his hands a lot this year. He’s a tremendous rebounder as well. Any time you can get that rebound, even if he’s playing off the ball, he’s going to have the freedom to bring the ball up the floor and get us into a fast break situation. Monte [Morris] will handle it a lot when he’s in the game, and then the other way that we’ve used our bigs in the past obviously with Georges and Melvin.

That’s one thing I think Melvin has really grown is his ability to make plays off the bounce. The big is figuring out now when to hand off and when to throw ahead in a ball screen. That’s the growth I think Melvin’s had the past few years.

Who is Chris Babb, offensively and defensively?

That’s a good question. That’s one area I’ve been very impressed with DeAndre is his ability to move his feet. He’s got a great wide stance and can really get into the ball and pressure. I think we’ll have a capability of being a little bit better defensively. That’s something that we have to [do]. I don’t think we have quite as many offensive weapons as we did a year ago, but I think we should be able to be better defensively.

Hogue moves his feet well on the perimeter and has great size. Naz Long has shown me a very good ability to move his feet and stay in front of guys. And then Melvin, Georges, Daniel, I think can protect the rim back there. So I think, top to bottom, we’re probably a little bit better defensively than we were a year ago.

Georges had a great freshman year. How has he grown in the past five months?

He’s so productive. Going back, and I know I’ve talked about this before, to when I started watching him for the first time when I saw him out at Tilton Prep School, and he was just abusing Nerlens Noel. That’s kind of who he is. He plays with a chip on his shoulder. He can do it all from every spot on the floor, and again, you talk about versatility in a basketball player Georges probably stands out as much as anybody.

How much has Melvin meant to the team since he’s been here, and how much will he have to mean to the team this year?

Melvin has done everything for us. It says all you need to know about Melvin Ejim when you lead the league in rebounding. The most athletic and very physical conference, when you’re that size and lead the league in rebounding, that says all you need to know.

The other thing about Melvin is he does everything right. [He’s] the Scholar Athlete of the Year in the Big 12 Conference; he’s going to get his degree this year. He’s a guy I think we’re all very proud of. It blows me away that Melvin’s a senior. He’s done so much for this program and university.

On the team’s two freshmen, Monte Morris and Matt Thomas —

Monte Morris has been very, very good for us. I knew he was a good player, but the learning curve for a freshman point guard is as high as you’re going to find. Monte has done a tremendous job. He’s a low turnover guy; he can get you into an offense; he makes tremendous decisions.

Matt Thomas has really been shooting the ball well. Matt never played man-to-man basketball defensively in his high school career, so that’s been new to him. He’s going to continue to develop and get better on that end.
IMPACT FRESHMEN
Matt Thomas & Monte Morris

For the second-straight season, ISU head coach Fred Hoiberg and his staff have reigned in a top-100 recruit. Last year, it was Tilton’s Georges Niang, who led Iowa State in scoring several games and start most of last year. This year, it is a pair of top-100 freshmen in Matt Thomas, of Onalaska, Wis.; and Monte Morris, of Flint, Mich.

Thomas’ recruitment was relatively quiet until the summer before his season year after he’d already verbally committed to Iowa State. The 6-foot-3-inch shooter soared up the national recruiting rankings thanks to his play on the national AAU circuit, mostly from his ability to shoot the ball. Thomas finished high school averaging 28 points per game and shooting 36 percent from three.

Morris is a 6-foot-1-inch guard who was used to the spotlight as he was named Michigan’s Mr. Basketball. Hoiberg called Morris the first true point guard that he’s ever had in his time at Iowa State.

This won’t be the first time Hoiberg has had to rely on freshmen to play big roles on his team. Preseason All-Big 12 forward Melvin Ejim has started since his freshman year, and last year, Niang started most of the year, even leading in scoring in a number of games.

Thomas was a starter at the No. 2 guard spot in of the team’s first game against Augustana on Nov. 3. Morris came off the bench at the point in relief for senior DeAndre Kane.

IMPACT FRESHMEN
Jadda Buckley

After being recruited by schools from across the country, Jadda Buckley chose the one closest to home.

The Mason City, Iowa, native was by recruited schools such as Ohio State and UCLA. The consensus top-50 recruit said she has always wanted to play for Iowa State’s coaches.

“Bill Fennelly is intense; he’s competitive, and he wants to win — which are all things that I want to do as well,” Buckley said.

Buckley is one of four freshmen on Iowa State’s roster. After graduating three seniors — including WNBA players Anna Prins and Chelsea Poppens — ISU coach Fennelly is looking for players to fill their shoes.

“Jadda Buckley will be a major part of our team, no question,” Fennelly said. “She’s a kid from our state, and I think she’s going to do a lot of really really good things here.”

Buckley was the ninth-ranked point guard in her class by ESPN. In high school, Buckley was a two-time first-team all-state player.

Her biggest success came as a 3-point shooter. She broke Mason City High School’s record of career 3-pointers with 131 and shot 44 percent from beyond the arc.

Fennelly, however, wants to take advantage of a different part of Buckley’s game.

“One of the things that I think Jadda [Buckley] can do: she can defend at a Big 12 level,” Fennelly said. “Jadda, I think, embraces that a little bit.”

Jadda Buckley is one of four freshmen on the women’s team this season. As a top-50 basketball recruit, the Iowa native was recruited by schools nationwide.

Jadda Buckley was the ninth-ranked point guard in her class by ESPN. In high school, Buckley was a two-time first-team all-state player.

Her biggest success came as a 3-point shooter. She broke Mason City High School’s record of career 3-pointers with 131 and shot 44 percent from beyond the arc.

Fennelly, however, wants to take advantage of a different part of Buckley’s game.

“One of the things that I think Jadda [Buckley] can do: she can defend at a Big 12 level,” Fennelly said. “Jadda, I think, embraces that a little bit.”

Jadda Buckley is one of four freshmen on the women’s team this season. As a top-50 basketball recruit, the Iowa native was recruited by schools nationwide.
Dining on Campus

With many locations, flexible meal plans, extended hours and fresh food right on campus, we’re here to serve you!

ISU Dining Locations

Dining Centers
1. Seasons Marketplace
   - MWL Commons
2. Union Drive Marketplace
   - Union Drive Community Center
3. Conversations Dining
   - Oak-Elm Hall
4. Storms Dining
   - Knapp-Storms Dining Complex

Restaurants
5. Hawthorn Market & Café
   - Frederiksen Court Community Center
6. Clyde’s Sports Club
   - Union Drive Community Center
7. MU Food Court
   - Memorial Union

C-Stores
8. East Side Market
   - MWL Commons
9. South Side Market
   - Wallace and Wilson Commons
10. West Side Market
    - Union Drive Community Center

Cafés
11. Bookends Café
    - Parks Library
12. Business Café
    - Gerdin Business Building
13. Caribou® Coffee
    - The Hub
14. Courtyard Café
    - Lagomarcino Hall
15. Design Café
    - Design
16. Froots
    - State Gym
17. Gentle Doctor Café
    - Veterinary Medicine
18. Hub Grill & Café
    - The Hub
19. MU Market & Café
    - Memorial Union
20. Global Café
    - Curtiss Hall

Meal Plans 101

- M = Meal uses a “meal” from your meal plan
- MB = Meal Bundle select menu that also uses a “meal” from your meal plan
- DS = Dining Dollar$ for use at any ISU Dining location

[Map of ISU Campus with dining locations highlighted]
COMING TO UBS IN JANUARY OF 2014

MAGIC MONDAY

THE LAST MEN’S BIG 12 CONFERENCE BASKETBALL GAME PLAYED EACH WEEK IS A MAGIC MONDAY GAME.

WHEN THE CYCLONES SCORE...

60+ POINTS = 10% OFF
70+ POINTS = 15% OFF
80+ POINTS = 20% OFF
90+ POINTS = 25% OFF

IOWA STATE UNIVERSITY BOOKSTORE
www.isubookstore.com