Romney campaigns in Ames

By Katelynn McCollough

Presidential candidate Mitt Romney is not a fan of Ames on Friday. Romney will speak at Kildeer Construction Services which is where he was when he visited Ames in December (31). Kildeer Construction is located at 3025 18th St. If you are using a GPS to locate the event, however, the address you will need to use is 3025 West Lincoln St. Because the event will open at 3:30 p.m., it is expected to begin between 3:30 p.m. and 4:00 p.m.

Barack Obama and Romney have made multiple visits to the state of Iowa because it is a swing state that holds vital electoral votes that will decide whether or not the White House will remain in the Democratic or Republican party.

The ISU website was limited to bags, liquids, sharp objects, and any object that may be harmful to others or security. ASU students who will be attending the event will need to locate the event, however, the address you will need to use is 2335 West Lincoln Way from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Thursday.

Second round of the Yell Like Hell competition will take place Wednesday on Central Campus. Seven sorority-fraternity pairings were selected to participate in second cuts by judges through a point-based system of their performance in first cuts. These routine that convey that theme to the audience, these routines involve an enormous amount of energy and efficiency, arm waving and, of course, yelling at full volume. Most students were shown the many routine, waving, and without rest.

The competition was originally in the Cytennial building in 1963, where students living in residence halls were invited to compete and submit “an original yell” according to the ISU website. The five finalists then participate in second cuts by judges through a point-based system of their performance in first cuts. Participants of that competition were then chosen to perform while chanting and stomping. Members of the groups fully paint their bodies before performing. Yell Like Hell is a long-lasting ISU tradition.

The Greek communities get together for the annual Yell Like Hell competition Wednesday on Central Campus. Each sorority-fraternity pairing picked a different theme, and should be asked in a small poster, which is to be distributed to the ISU website. The five finalists then participate in second cuts by judges through a point-based system of their performance in first cuts.

The Ice Age Dispersal of Humans to the Americas

Ted Goebel is an anthropologist who studies the Ice Age dispersal of hominins into the Americas. His team developed previously unknown details about the initial migration of humans into the New World, based on the study of ancient shells.

The Ice Age is a time of great climate change when glaciers covered much of the Northern Hemisphere. This period was marked by dramatic swings in temperature and precipitation, which had a profound impact on the environments of the time. As the climate cooled, the land became more arid, and the environment became more challenging for humans and other species.

The ice age began around 2.6 million years ago and ended around 10,000 years ago. During this time, the Earth's climate was significantly different than it is today, with much of the Northern Hemisphere covered in ice. The ice age had a profound impact on the evolution of humans and other species.

Locals promote green efforts at ISU

By Michael Finn

A convention of local green-minded businesses and organizations gathered Wednesday outside Nixon Library to promote Campus Sustainability Day. Hosted by The Green Umbrella, a student-run organization that works to promote sustainability efforts around campus, the event featured displays from 27 Ames-based small businesses, nonprofit organizations, and student-run societies, all united and guided by a common interest in a sustainable future.

"You can see that these businesses, where you might not expect, are making these changes, are making serious efforts to become leaders in sustainability," said Rachelle Rowe, liaison for the Resolution Board, writing things like, "I will ride my bike to class more often," or "I will eat more veggies and less meat." "Our goal is to show students that it's really easy to make sustainable changes in your life," Rowe said.

Students wandered from booth to booth, picking up information and materials about the event. Five coffee mugs were given to people who visited all 27 displays. Before leaving, people filled out a pledge of sustainability to "The Green Revolution Board" vowing things like, "I will ride my bike to class tomorrow," or "I will eat more veggies and less meat.

Iowa State was one of 4 of 14 college campuses in the country that participated in National Campus Sustainability Day; the main purpose of this day was to enlighten students about green methods.

"Everyone is doing something both individually and collectively to assist with the efforts to make campus more sustainable," said Merry Rankin, director of sustainability for facilities planning and management. "We have a sustainable future in our eyesight. We want to make sustainability our figurehead of the Ames local music scene, their ambition plans to make campus greener and more sustainable, some of which have just possibly started within the last few months, because of the fact that Ames and Iowa State are revving up their efforts to become leaders of the sustainability efforts around campus, the event was present at Iowa State's National Campus Sustainability Day; the main purpose of this day was to enlighten students about green methods.

“We like supporting [ISU] students,” Ballard noted that ambulances have even been called to the trail for people that lose their breath. It’s become known as a trauma trail, and it is my favorite place to go.” Pat said.

Bands praise Ames

Editor’s note:

This is a great one to do a little music quiz, a little trivia and some sound bites. There are so many good things going on. There is plenty for the local music industry to boast about, a band in Ames.

“Here’s a perfect place to be in a band,” said Patrick Fleming of Poison Control Center. “The scene is so small you can bang yourself into the middle of the country. It’s very cool to go on tour. There’s been all these Ames bands who’ve made it on their own.

For Poison Control Center, the best part of the Ames scene is landing in the early 2000s and having the Ames music scene move to a larger crowd. “I think it’s like going to a family reunion, you see so many of these other families that are related to you, and you see so many people and you are also part of this bigger family,” Fleming said of being part of the music scene.

“We’re all supportive of one another,” said Lee Ballard. “It’s a year-long process,” Ballard said. “We do a really good job.”
Red Taylor Swift

Music: Taylor Swift

By Maggie McIntyre

Taylor Swift's fourth studio album, 'Red,' has been on the charts and trending since its release and it’s easy to see why. It’s a good match to the artist's previous albums, yet it contains some new elements of sound.

The album opens with the title track, which sets the tone for the album. Swift's vocals are powerful and emotional, and the song features a country rock sound.

The second track, 'We Are Never Ever Getting Back Together,' features a catchy chorus and a sweet melody. Swift's vocals are strong and confident, and the song is a fun and upbeat dance track.

Another standout track is 'I Knew You Were Trouble,' which features a fast-paced beat and a catchy chorus. The song is a great example of Swift's ability to write pop songs with depth and meaning.

'22' is a slow and emotional ballad that features Swift's powerful vocals. The song is a beautiful tribute to the artist's love for her fiancé, and it's a great example of Swift's ability to write intimate and heartfelt songs.

Overall, 'Red' is a great album that features some of Swift's best songs yet. It's a must-listen for fans of the artist and anyone who appreciates a good pop album.

Fun Facts

Giving a “thumps up” also represents the American Sign Language symbol for the number “30.”

Iron Eyes Cody, the crying Native American in the famous anti-pollution TV commercial, was actually an Italian-American named Oscar DeCorti.

Mitt Romney’s first name is Willard. When he ran for Governor of Massachusetts in 2002, one of his campaign slogans was “Mitt Happens.”

As the name implies, a gauntlet is a mohawk about the size of a school bus. But that’s not the scary part. Besides being 2-ton, bus-size behemoths with beak-like mouths that can cut through steel cable, they also happen to be carnivorous.

The male giraffe determines a female’s fertility by tasting her urine. If it tastes good, she’s fertile.

Behemoths with beak-like mouths that can cut through steel cable, they have been known to break through gates to get at the cows in farmers’ fields.

In the early days of fire fighting, the Dalmatian served an important purpose. They not only made good watchdogs, they also formed very close bonds with the station horses and kept them company.

The familiar piano tune we know as “Chopsticks” was written by a 16-year-old girl in 1877 and was published as “The Celebrated Chop Waltz.”
