Bill Bryson talks to the audience on Monday in Stephens Auditorium. He talked about the ways he related to Iowa while growing up in Des Moines, traveling the world and what he does as an author in England.

Olivia Madison, dean of Parks Library, said in a recent library satisfaction survey that the library is providing satisfactory print collections to graduate research.

"Fifty-four percent of graduate students said we, the library, were important to their academic success," Madison said. "A graduate student can do any number of things by using the library, and to me that's important."

I'm not a Biology major, but I love science. It's fascinating to me and the way it works. I enjoy learning about biology, and I believe that is the reason why I chose to major in Biology.

Ronald has traveled the world in

Bill Bryson's books, but ISU students only had to travel to Stephens Auditorium to hear the writer speak Monday.

Bryson, an award-winning writer, spoke to an audience that was composed of approximately 1,600 community members, students and faculty who were interested in his work. He has written several books, including "The History of Nearly Everything" and "The Thunderbolt Kid," which tells the tale of his childhood in Des Moines.

Students need to find truths in city election

Encouraging the ISU student body to to vote in local elections is not just a way to satisfy civic duty. It is a crucial first step towards creating an informed electorate.

As a student living in Ames, I do not believe that the ignorance or misinformation that surrounds local elections is a result of the students being too busy or too lazy to go out and vote. It simply stems from the lack of voter registration and education.

Local elections can have a substantial impact on the quality of life. Whether it is the city council representatives or garage sales in our neighborhood, there are thousands of individuals that make up the city of Ames. It is not uncommon for these city council members to be the ones that live on the street, set the rules, and make the decisions that will affect your everyday life.

In order to be able to make informed decisions on how you will vote in the upcoming elections, you must be fully aware of the issues and the candidates. There are thousands of resources available to help you find this information.

The Iowa State Daily has the best opinion section and political coverage in the state. Please take the time to read articles that discuss and analyze the issues and candidates. The articles also provide updates on what is happening in the community.

In addition to the Iowa State Daily, there are many other resources available to you. The Ames Public Library has a collection of books, newspapers, and magazines that cover local issues and candidates. The Ames Public Library also has a website that allows you to search for information on local candidates and issues.

There are also many websites that provide information on local candidates and issues. Websites such as Ballotpedia.org and VoteSmart.org provide information on local candidates and issues. These websites also allow you to search for candidates and issues by name, party, or district.

In order to be able to make informed decisions on how you will vote in the upcoming elections, you must be fully aware of the issues and the candidates. There are thousands of resources available to help you find this information.

It is important to vote in local elections. Just as local elections should be the first step towards creating an informed electorate, local elections should also be the first step towards creating an informed citizenry.
Become actively informed about local political activity

Jani Kerkov is a sophomore mass communication major.

As a student who is heavily involved in the political process, I find that the upcoming City Council election is extremely important. This year’s election has been notably noted as members of the voting population, but that isn’t the only reason. The reason is, at least in my opinion, that there are two candidates who are above and beyond in their efforts to reach out to voters. Their enthusiasm is contagious.

Seipold took the initiative to organize voters on campus and carry this campaign to students who are not currently voting. Her campaign shares our concern about a person’s ability to participate in the democratic process. She realizes the importance of getting people to the polls.

ISU races to Big 12 crown with 9 matches left

Coach keeps team focused on standings, opponents' play

By Clay Coile

From even with nine matches left on the schedule and 11 of 12 matches completed, the ISU volleyball team already has shown improvement in strengths, kills, serving and digging.

The Cyclones are the best in the Big 12 in kills per set with 1.88, second behind Kansas in aces per set with 3.53, second behind Kansas in kills per set with 14.05 and second behind Oklahoma in digs per set with 12.07.

On the other hand, ISU coach Chinny Stewart has high expectations for the team that needs to work on strength, coordination and execution with which the Cyclones took last in the Big 12, with just 1.10 per set — and opponent hitting percentage, which is in line with the Big 12 at .231.

When it comes to winning a Big 12 championship, Stewart-Lynn has said before that strong digging and defense work well.

"We have to have a better percentage of incoming serves and have to block a little better," Stewart-Lynn said.

"I think it's really a question of balance. It's come down to work on what we do really well because that can be elite for us at the end of the year. We don't want to go get so lost that we've got to get better blocking, we've got to get better offensively, you know, stuff like that."

Along those lines, Stewart-Lynn has said the Cyclones will need to rely on the team's starting lineup.

"I don't think passing and serving is going to be enough," Stewart-Lynn said. "It's really about making sure we know that the team that's good and this is the team that we can rely on. We can't just rely on that."

The Cyclones currently have a 6-2 record so far in the season and are hoping to win the rest of their games, along with taking the title of Big 12 Champions this year. "That's the goal of winning the Big 12. Our goal is to completely win out this year to be in every team that we face and give the best serve we can and that we keep getting better in every area and to know that we still have another level that we can go to," Stewart-Lynn said.

The Cyclones are currently tied for second in the Big 12 and two matches behind the conference leader Kansas (15-2, 8-0 Big 12). The Cyclones lost to Texas in Austin back on Oct. 19 and have one more match against them, on Nov. 27 at Hilton Coliseum, but they still need the Longhorns to lose at least three matches in order to win the conference outright.

Cyclones focus on finishing tournaments for spring season

Men's golf team in top 40, looking for improvements in 1st round play

After the completion of its fall schedule, the ISU men's golf team finds itself in the top 40 in both the Golfweek/Sagarin and Golfstat.com tournaments.

This fall, the Cyclones finished in seventh place at the John Hay Cup Invitational in his best finish at 12th place tie at the Bridgestone Invitational.

The ISU men's golf team wrapped up the 2013 Results with a record number of team leaders. "This year we've seen a record number of team leaders, and that's good," Tank said.

The goal of other goals he has in mind. "Those are really our goals and this offseason, the work that the guys do, is really going to determine how many of those we can achieve."

After taking some time off, Fernandez mentioned maintaining his form around the greens and regaining confidence in his golf swing.

"We haven't worked out all of the kinks yet," Scott said. "But I'm confident in our team members that we can reach."
Health care tips: Avoid dry, scratchy skin with creams, lip balms

By Ali Hanson

Dampening more than a person’s mood, cold weather can also take a toll on one’s skin due to harsh winds and other skin-drying factors. Common symptoms include dry or chapped skin, which can lead to a dull complexion or itchy skin effects and chapped lips. Many beauty retailers have created solutions to these cold weather ailments.

Consultant for Clinique in Johnston in Ames gave advice for how to keep the skin healthy during the winter and use beauty products sold at Clinique counters.

“When speaking of the brand’s Moisture Surge line, Pals said the line can take care of your skin during the day and can be used year-round,” Pals said. “The cream smooths fine lines while absorbing oil, acting as an intense conditioner and foundation.”

For students on the go, Pals said the Clinique Moisture Surge Extended Thirst Relief gel can be used any time of the day, under or over makeup. This solution removes flakiness, tens- tion and fine lines by replenishing the skin with instant moisture.

“All of these products have been reconstructed specifically for this fall season and can be used year-round,” Pals said.

Aside from skin health, colder weather can also affect the lip and mouth area.

For students on the go, Pals said she recommends the Clinique Moisture Surge Extended Thirst Relief gel that can be used at any time of the day.

“Whenever students, men or women, come to class, they turn their backs. We notice what students wear, often more of the women than the men. She said she tends to be a professor in the School of Education, knowing students will be seeking in classrooms thinking about ‘what they’re wearing to my class... it’s also what they’re wearing to a class room, to a lab class, a class that’s more hands on,’” Newell said.

She also said she tends to notice clothing that seems in a negative way more than clothing that strikes in a positive way. “Whenever students, men or women, come to class, they turn their backs. We notice what students wear, often more of the women than the men. She said she tends to be a professor in the School of Education, knowing students will be seeking in classrooms thinking about ‘what they’re wearing to my class... it’s also what they’re wearing to a class room, to a lab class, a class that’s more hands on,’” Newell said.

Most people don’t get distressed in the morn- ing about what they’ll be wearing to a class, but then there’s more profes- sors saying, ‘Isn’t it October already?’ Some clear that last night’s sweaters after some late night study cramming, or you’re about to put on your snow pants, professors notice of those things,” Newell said.

“Students express themselves in any way they can. When they come in the morning with their keys hanging, Newell said, ‘I notice more when they dress in the morning with how they dress,’ Newell said. ‘Do we really want to call them out on bad?’

"A lot of the students 'at school feel like the gym is just another part of the code they live by," Fitten said.

Fitten said that while some believe grey house shoes should be exempt from Chapter 11, they also believe that there is no such thing as a "grey house shoe that is not good." Fitten said the entire code is seen as a "seemingly obvious expectations of Chapter 13 could cost upward of 100,000 stars on the group's charts. He said for those grey shoes that can't afford minimum costs, the cost could get passed down to students who live there, taking the cost of living in a grey house chapter.
