It wasn’t the opener they had hoped for, but the Cyclones got the upset they wanted Saturday night with a 20-10 win over Northern Iowa.

While the win leaves Iowa State 1-0, it also leaves the team with plenty of work to do before the team headlines come to town the next Saturday.

“We absorbed and learned a lot from Saturday night,” said coach Paul Rhoads. “Now it’s time to take that knowledge and improve our football team.”

The Cyclones expanded on the No. 19 probe team in the nation the Panthers as quarterback Jared Jantz had a lackluster first three quarters of the game.

The City College of San Francisco football team entered the fourth quarter 12-0 on 12 of 19 in touchdowns and three interceptions. Northern Iowa also was ahead 10-7 after running a 12-play 50-yard drive that took up 1:10 of game time in the third quarter.

But in crucial junctures, Jantz got the job done. He marched the Cyclones from the field, issued a 47-yard touchdown to Keith Slow (also named the game’s MVP), and rushed for a touchdown after an 11-play touchdown pass from UNI quarterback Tyrell Harris.

“Tough fourth down, so we also did that,” said Jantz. “I gave him a shot and he made an amazing play.”

Jantz and his teammates “feel very confident we can still learn a lot in the next session,” the coach said. “We have a lot of work to do.”

Addressing 1,500 rain-soaked tea partyers at a rally in Des Moines, Sarah Palin revealed her five-step plan to a better America.

“My plan is a bona fide pro-working man’s plan,” the 2008 vice presidential nominee said.

“With the economy and the budget out of control, that’s all.”

No,” Rhoads said about the team’s mindset following the game Saturday night, expressed that while they played great against the Hawkeyes.

“We know exactly what they’re going to do,” Rhoads said. “It’s not something we’ve seen before.”

Justin Timberlake’s wax figure for president?

The “Taxi” star was set to be unveiled at Madame Tussauds in Times Square, New York, where his wax figure was unveiled Thursday.

If a wax figure for an actor is set to become a real candidate for the presidential election, you can imagine the implications of that. The idea of having a wax figure for the president would be quite the attention-grabbing event.

Sioux mascot fight rages on

North Dakota, NCAA disagree on logo’s usage

By David Bartholomew

The University of North Dakota has found itself in the center of a firestorm over the use of a logo representing an American Indian chief. The Native American Center for Historical Education and Reconciliation (NACHER) has been strong in its criticism of the Fighting Sioux logo, which is seen by many as offensive to the American Indian community in the last several decades.

North Dakota, the home state of the Fighting Sioux, has been at the center of the controversy for years. The University of North Dakota (UND) and the North Dakota State University (NDSU) are both public universities in the state, and the Fighting Sioux logo has been a part of UND's sports teams for over 50 years.

The logo, which features a Native American chief, has been the subject of much criticism over the years. Some people have argued that the logo is offensive and perpetuates negative stereotypes about Native Americans. Others have argued that the logo is a symbol of pride and tradition for the University of North Dakota.

In 2005, the university decided to consult with the state's attorney general about the possibility of using the Fighting Sioux logo. The attorney general concluded that the logo did not violate any laws, and the university continued to use it.

In 2007, the university decided to consult with the Native American Center for Historical Education and Reconciliation (NACHER) about the possibility of changing the logo. NACHER is a group of Native American leaders who have been advocating for changes to the logo for many years.

NACHER has been critical of the Fighting Sioux logo, arguing that it perpetuates negative stereotypes about Native Americans and is offensive to many people. NACHER has called for the university to remove the logo and find a new one.

The university has been slow to respond to NACHER's calls for change. In 2010, the university announced that it was considering changing the logo, but the decision was not made public until 2013.

In 2013, the university decided to remove the Fighting Sioux logo and replace it with a new one. The new logo was designed by a Native American artist and features a symbol that represents unity and strength.

The decision to change the logo was met with mixed reactions. Some people were happy that the university was finally taking action to address the controversy, while others were angry that the university was not doing more to change the logo.

The new logo has been well-received by many people, and it is hoped that it will help to heal some of the divisions that have existed between the university and the Native American community.

The controversy over the Fighting Sioux logo continues to be a source of tension for many people in the area. The issue is complex and emotional, and there are likely to be many more developments in the future.

Labor Day

Remember origins, roots of your celebration

By Elliott Devlin

Life is a series of events, and some are more significant than others. Labor Day is one of them. It is a national holiday in the United States, celebrated on the first Monday of September. It was established to recognize the contributions and achievements of workers. In honor of Labor Day, we will explore its history, significance, and traditions.

Origins of Labor Day:

Labor Day was first observed in 1882, and it was inspired by a march organized by the American Federation of Labor. The march was led by Peter J. McGuire, a carpenter and union organizer, who was a friend of labor leaders and a proponent of worker rights.

McGuire designed a holiday that would celebrate the contributions of workers to society and the economy. He chose September 5 as the date because it was the anniversary of the Pullman Strike of 1877, which was a significant event in the labor movement.

During the Pullman Strike, workers went on strike to protest low wages and poor working conditions. The strike was supported by the American Federation of Labor, and it involved thousands of workers across the country. The strike was eventually resolved through negotiations, but it highlighted the need for workers to organize and fight for better conditions.

Significance of Labor Day:

Labor Day is significant because it is a day to celebrate the contributions of workers to society and the economy. It is a day to recognize the hard work and dedication of workers and to honor their achievements.

Labor Day is also a time for workers to reflect on their rights and to demand better working conditions and higher wages. It is a time for workers to come together and to demand a fairer and more just society.

Labor Day traditions:

Labor Day is celebrated in various ways across the United States. Some of the most common traditions include:

- Parades: Labor Day parades are a common way to celebrate the holiday. They usually feature union members, politicians, and other community leaders.
- Picnics: Labor Day picnics are a traditional way to celebrate the holiday. They are often held in parks or other outdoor locations.
- Barbecues: Labor Day barbecues are a popular way to celebrate the holiday. They are often held in backyards or other outdoor locations.

In conclusion, Labor Day is a significant holiday in the United States that is celebrated to recognize the contributions and achievements of workers. It is a day to honor the hard work and dedication of workers and to demand a fairer and more just society. Whether you choose to celebrate Labor Day with a parade, picnic, or barbecue, it is a day to remember the importance of workers in our society and to recognize their contributions to our economy and society.

Iowa State prepares to rebound after suffering first losses of season

By Dylan Montz

In Minneapolis, Iowa State allowed its first loss of the season as well as suffered its first losses at the hands of the 12th-ranked Gophers, 0-3 on Friday, and Georgia, 2-0, on Sunday.

Despite being down early and matched with their opponents in all statistical categories, the Cyclones (5-1-2) didn’t come out with a sense of urgency to win.

Senior midfielder Emily Goldstein said the team needs to learn how to come out and compete every time the Cyclones take the field.

“We just didn’t come out fast from the start,” Goldstein said. “We partly came out too relaxed and we didn’t play like we did last weekend versus Washington. We weren’t working the 0-0-15 halves and we weren’t moving the ball or playing our game. We had our chances, but we just weren’t able to finish them.”

The area of improvement for Iowa State this week will be putting pressure on the ball because that was the weak spot of the team. Iowa State is supposed to be second in the nation against the Cyclone defense. Members also will focus on coming out against every game with a mindset to win.

“We just need to learn how to come out and compete every game,” said ISU assistant coach Ben Madsen. “There wasn’t just one issue, we’re coming to come out and make it happen. It has to be the full 90 minutes. It can’t be just in spurts, we need to be aggressive from the very start,” Goldstein said. “We just kind of came out flat and didn’t play like we did last weekend.”

“We all know that we need to come out strong to start this last weekend,” Goldstein said. “We have some tough competition this weekend and we just need to get refocused and gain back some confidence in our preparation for the full 90 minutes.”

For now, Goldstein and her teammates feel they need to focus on making themselves better for what the Hardrocks come to town.

“We also need to do the same right the ship, and put the ball back in the net,” Goldstein said. “We just need to make sure that we work on the games to come that we were on the weekend there wasn’t as good as they could have been and put things into the game for this weekend,” Goldstein said.

Iowa State will take on the Hardrocks on Friday at 7 p.m. in Iowa City. The match will be a part of the Iowa Corn Cy-Hawk Series.

Cyclones pass test, defeat No. 9 Florida in 5 sets

By Dean Berhow-Goll

Iowa State passed its first true test of the season with flying colors.

A number of Cyclones (7-0) had a pro- tion day against Florida. Junior Kelsey Poster led Iowa State with 15 kills while tallying three blocks. Florida dominated the next two sets. In set four, the Gators held Iowa State to a .229 hitting percentage while tallying 12 kills and 13 digs. The Cyclones had at least five kills.

On the defensive end, Iowa State recorded 20 blocks. Kristen Hahn had 25 digs while tallying three blocks. Florida dominated in the next two sets. In set four, the Gators held Iowa State to a .229 hitting percentage while tallying 12 kills and 13 digs. The Cyclones had at least five kills.

Half of Big 12 off as everybody wonders about future

By Glenmd Hopkins

Oklahoma coach Bob Stoops acknowledged that he knew when the game gets here, you know when the game gets here, said. “I practice hard, play hard and know when the game gets here.

“Willie Scott, he’s a tremendous athlete,” said junior linebacker Jake Knott. “He’s got tons of speed, great explosiveness. He’s been a playmaker all season, and the way he prefers to play with the loss of Nebraska (Big Ten) and Colorado (Pac-12), the Big 12 needs to play well on the defensive line. We all remember what he did last week, after a failed hook-and-ladder by the Effects morning and food service and reception

It’s date night. Instead of going out to eat or to the movies, you can stay at home and make it a night to remember.

First, decide what you’re under-lying for your date night. Is it a casual dinner at home? Is it a romantic evening? Is it a fun, laid-back atmosphere? Whatever your theme will be, there are a few simple ideas that can help you create a memorable evening.

Create a clean and simple place setting. Chalkboard paper makes a great centerpiece, as old Scrabble letters work perfectly for this. Place settings. Small knick knacks such as old Scrabble letters work perfectly for this.

The centerpiece doesn’t have to be on a variety of brightly colored plates or felt squares or chalkboard paper. While easy placemat-esque materials such as flowers or limbs bring a sense of nature and centerpieces. The centerpiece.

You can also add some bubblegum pink color to your setup is by mixing them on a variety of brightly colored dishes. Old jars used as glassware adds rustic things from around your space. The centerpiece.

Mix and match to create an ideal look.
