Early voting helps keep election lines short

By Lisanda Vila

With the presidential election looming on the horizon, it is important for young voters to be well-informed about the procedures. Thursday is the beginning of the countdown to Election Day, so early voters can begin casting their ballots in person starting at 8 a.m. Here’s how ISU students can go about voting:

First, students interested in voting must meet a few prerequisites. They must be U.S. citizens, 18 or older, and they must be registered to vote. For the day they vote, said Lucy Martin, Story County auditor and commissioner of elections, “She’s strongly advised not only registering ahead of time but voting early as well.”

“If you feel comfortable voting on the day of the election, that’s great; however, voting early will help reduce the lines on Election Day,” Martin said.

The American Civil Liberties Union is fighting the decision by Iowa Secretary of State Bob Herring to make two new administrative rules that would make it easier to file a voter fraud complaint in Iowa. According to Schultz, new administrative rules, a person only needs to prove “suspicious activity” when it comes to filing a complaint in an election. A person also needs to register, ahead of time but voting early as well.”

“If you feel comfortable voting on the day of the election, that’s great; however, voting early will help reduce the lines on Election Day,” Martin said.

Ames wins Healthy Iowa award

By Leah Hansen

The city’s steps toward healthy living were recognized when Ames was named the Healthiest City in Iowa in the inaugural Healthy Iowa Community Award Tuesday, Sept. 10.

“We’re thrilled because we had a group that has been working on the Healthy Ames Initiative,” Hamilton said. “When I tell them many steps we would all like to follow, the fact that this acknowledgment that we have already done one more steps was a real shot in the arm.”

The award was presented by Blakely Hietz, co-chairwoman of Healthy Ames Initiative, and Stephanie Downs, Healthy Ames community coordinator, Tuesday, Sept. 10.

During the ceremony, Mayor Ann Campbell said, “We were thrilled because we had a group that has been working on the Healthy Ames Initiative.”

“It is a very good statement for the entire community that we have something very good going and that we can use that hopefully to further the initiatives that have been started,” Campbell said.

The application for the award was submitted by the Healthy Ames Initiative, formerly known as the Ames Blue Zones Project Team.

When Ames was not chosen as one of the Top 10 Cities, the committee decided it would better serve the community of Ames with a self-declared评选.

“We ran through a long list of criteria and came up with this [award] and that is what we have already done in so many things,” Campbell said.

The next step is to encourage Ames residents to continue living healthy.

It’s early, probably my busiest season,” she said, adding that voters were more knowledgeable than in previous years. “I think they are coming to us to get things from them to get things from them.

If voters choose to register the day of, they must be able to prove both their identity and U.S. citizenship. If they are younger than 18 or are not old enough to vote, they must be able to prove who they are.

Voters should also be aware of their rights and responsibilities. For example, if they want to register to vote, they need to be a U.S. citizen, at least 18 years old, and a resident of Iowa for at least 30 days.

Students teach free Turkish

By Katherine Marcheski

One culture group on campus has begun offering, for the first time, free language classes for students and community members.

Members of the Turkish Student Association, a student-based club at Iowa State, are voluntarily teaching Turkish three days a week to any interested participants.

Nickie Englin, senior in chemistry and health, said she has been a part of the last three weeks of teaching the class.

“I went to Turkey this summer for months, and I wanted to share my experience with campus and maybe encourage students to start learning the language,” Englein said. “It’s a good offer to take them up on, and I hope to go back to Turkey this time knowing more of the language.”

On Mondays and Wednesdays, students are attracted to try Turkish because of the group, and Fridays are designated for conversation and practice time.

“It’s a great opportunity,” said Nichole Engelhardt, graduate student in English. “It’s not exactly an easy language to learn, and I have family that can communicate and have a healthy living on campus and the well-being of the Ames/ ISU community.”

Englein has helped promote our Blue Zones efforts with the Governor’s Council on Physical Fitness and the Blue Zones Project of Iowa.

“We are selected [as a Blue Zone] among the initial four communities,” she said. “We are not teaching textbook Turkish, it’s not a textbook. The structure is similar to a textbook.

The instructor is all actual students as well, and follow a syllabus and the suggested pattern of lessons from a textbook.

It helps us as an order of what topics to teach, but we are not using teaching textbook Turkish. Saricaoglu said,” I studied English for a number of years in Turkey, and I had learned textbook English. Many of the students want to travel to Turkey, and we are not capable of understanding Turkish, so they are interested in learning the Turkish.

The class begins with the students introducing themselves and starting.

“Students want to be here, and they want to learn,” said Ayel Saricaoglu, graduate student in English. On Monday nights, the instructor Saricaoglu is a member of the Turkish Student Association and was asked to instruct one night a week, along with other members, in order to finish the Turkish.

“The one thing that people have been wondering about is how to learn the language, and how to travel to Turkey. Many of the students asked if they could take the Turkish class.

Manns, Landwehr tallied 18 assists. Landwehr is ranked third for all-time assists in her career at Iowa State.

As a freshman playing behind Kaylee Manns, Landwehr tallied 33 assists. But when the ISU Leagues took over the starting setter position in 2010, her assists climbed to 1,248 for her freshman year technically, but from Mechanicsville, Iowa.

The game seemed a lot faster for her. She had not been as present during her freshman year. “When she was a freshman, she didn’t have an opportunity to spread the ball and make better decisions,” said ISU coach Christy Johnson-Lynch. “The game seemed a lot faster for her. She didn’t even set on the second side all year. In 2011, she had 3,130 assists.”

Landwehr, who was a first-team All-American in 2011, is playing on an even higher level this season.

“With the offensive threats that Iowa State possesses this season, it almost a dream for setter Alison Landwehr. Landwehr is one of 11 Iowa State sophomores who can really be considered capable of lining up a hitter in a spread offens...
Scott Fernandez, a returning starter for the ISU men’s golf team, won an individual title at the VCU Shootout.

"I’m happy for Scott; he played great," said coach Pierre Tank. "Golf’s a sport where you can’t expect to play your best every day. We need to get accepting of poor shots, and be able to finish off those rounds," Tank said. "Golf’s a sport where you can’t expect to play your best every day. Redshirt freshman Collin Foster may not have played as well as expected, but Tank thinks it may take more than one tournament for the Cyclone defense to come around. "We didn’t finish off our round very well," Foster said. "I just wasn’t hitting the ball as well as I would have liked to," Foster said. "I think it was good experience for me to work on my game in practice," Foster said. "I think it was good experience for me to work on my game in practice." Foster said.

"Planetside 2" will support up to 2,000 players. The game's predecessor "Planetside" supported up to 399 players per map. "Planetside 2" is a first-person-shooter multiplayer online game that offers gamers in-depth gameplay and stunning graphics.

Samantha Koontz, sophomore in performing arts, is acting in "Tomfoolery," the latest production to be put on by ACTORS Inc., a community theatre group located on the side of campus, close to the edge of town where we come in, stage, and sing in one scenic location and then own a list of locations in theater. Our director gave us inspiration characters for how to think. He said that we had to think of characters for how to think. He said that we had to think of characters for how much better, so that you can beat out the people who are trying to get the same role as you. We also get a lot of opportunities to be more involved. I am co-producing this show because I am in it.

Vehicles are extremely customizable on the game. Outposts, server leaves, bases, towers, vehicle depots and much more can be captured for points. And as you go up in levels, you can capture more. In the meantime, I hope you are excited about the game after reading this and I am. When I first saw it, I was blown away and I hope you are too. It should be a lot of fun.
On the station's rotations a lot, a huge success, as he is played "Mad Men." Getting RJD2 was the theme song from the show the song "Beautiful Mine," the underground scene, wrote following. RJD2, a veteran in ambient artist with a growing Atlas Sound is an experimental festival. Based in Georgia, the national acts for this year's singer Bradford Cox, will be consists of Deerhunter lead Krohn, and Atlas Sound, which ground electronic deejay RJ er's events.

"It gives me the chance to play my music to people that normally wouldn't hear. I'm looking forward to sharing my music with the new students." Chris Ford

"Basically, we didn't have enough funding or management to run it at the time," said Darren Hushak, the music director of KURE. Instead, the station attempted to give the Maintenance Shop, where the festival has been for the past two years, near too-small. Last year, KURE flashing national acts such as Knowyohan and Steve孤立, that ground the station needed more space for next year, according Hushak.

After deciding to have the festival outside this year, then announced a new date for the festival. Hoping to make it a Friday or Saturday, the station started choosing dates for the event.

"We wanted to make sure there wasn't a football game or another event at the same time," Hushak said. "We worked with the Minimum Ames people to make sure we weren't going the same week."

After narrowing down to five dates, September 28 was finally chosen, which Hushak described as an "announcements," mostly because there are no football games and was at the same time as ISU AfterDark, which should help both crowds to each other's events.

KURE, the aisle of underground electronic groups RJD2, and possibly another which singer Bridal Fox, will be the venue for the KURE fest. Based in Georgia, Ashokan Sound will be an outdoor artist with a growing following. KURE, a return to the underground scene, wrote the song "Beautiful Mine," the theme song from the show "Mad Men." Getting RJD2 was a huge success, as he is played on the station's rotation a lot, of us were in was about racism and it's character died, Matangira said, "so it's nice to be refreshed with something new.

"It gives us a chance to learn something that we didn't normally do," Levings said. "We don't have comedy classes here, so we're really getting exposed to a new environment and a new way of acting, and it's really fun for everyone."

"I think it is exciting, because the last show that I did at ISU Theatre's "Noises Off," which opens at Fisher Theater this Friday, Matangira noted that it isn't set in stone quite yet. Another sponsor, Wilson Burrito, although Hushak added that it isn't set in stone quite yet. Another sponsor, Wilson Burrito.

"We've been trying to get Christopher The Conquered for the past two years, but I had other shows," Hushak said. "Three Monks fit this festival."

"It gives me the chance to play my music to people that normally wouldn't hear," Ford said. "I'm looking forward to sharing my music with the new students."

"It's really fun for everyone."
