Family and friends gathered outside Hilton Coliseum on Friday to place a memorial tree for Tyler Danielson, an ISU student who was involved in a fatal car accident in March 2010. The event was organized to celebrate Danielson’s time on an ISU campus.

Anyone who wanted to contribute to the planting was handed a shovel alongside fresh soil to complete the implantation of Danielson’s memorial.

The memorial ceremony was followed by the annual Alpha Kappa Delta scholarship, hosted in the Gallery Room of the Memorial Union. The Danielson family was occupied by students and faculty for the CTV Criminal Justice annual scholarship in the name of Tyler Danielson.

Matt DeSai, associate professor for the department of sociology, announced Laura Glas, senior in interdisciplinary studies, as the first to be awarded the CTV scholarship. Danielson’s parents presented the award to Glas.

“I was very honored when I was awarded the scholarship,” Glas said. “I didn’t know that my parents were going to be at the award ceremony, but it was an honor to receive them this privilege to have them.”

Glas discovered the opportunity to win the scholarship through vice president of the Criminal Justice Club — an organization that Danielson was also involved in.

“From my experience, when I think of the qualities that I thought would best represent the qualities that Tyler possessed, I would like to offer them the scholarship,” Glas said.

Glas will be graduating in May and will be continuing her education at the fall and winter semester.

ilot, the current Iowa secretary of state, announced his intention to move from the fourth district to the third district and will challenge Rep. Leonard Boswell, a Democrat.

The new redistricting plan divided Iowa’s four congressional districts for the U.S. House of Representatives from five districts to four districts, which would have resulted in a matchup of Republicans-represented Tom Latham and Boswell for the fourth district in 2012.

“Out of the entire Liberal Arts and Sciences colleges, the Liberal Arts and Sciences College is the one that has the most bright spots,” Latham said.

The Iowa State University is ‘going green’ and we should, too.”

“We are working to reduce financial costs of operations to greek facility chapters,” said Laura Glas, Collegiate Panhellenic Council vice president of finance.

But both Congressmen have represented their districts for many years. Latham has represented many of the counties in the new third district already, so he has a great knowledge of how to run in the polls.

But Congressmen Latham and Boswell have also worked with the U.S. Department of Defense to address the many issues that are important in their districts and the state.

Latham, a former Iowa Democratic Party chairman, has served as a congressman since 1995 and was re-elected to represent the fourth district.

“Congressmen Latham and Boswell have represented districts in the third district,” Latham said.

Suspect in bomb case had just been in prison

Colorado

The suspect in the attempted bombing of a Colorado mall was released from a federal prison only one week before, a federal law enforcement official said Thursday.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) identified the suspect as 44-year-old Michael Morelli Buchanon, John Lindzy, Donald Morelli and Gary Ryan, respectively.

The device was later found to be a pipe bomb.

A pipe bomb device was found after a fire broke out Wednesday in a back hallway at a Colorado mall.

Investigators say that fire may have been part of an attempt to detonate explosives.

Morelli Buchanon, John Lindzy, Donald Morelli and Gary Ryan are also being sought.

The device has been sent to the FBI crime laboratory, the FBI said.

Sheriff Ted Mink said.

Death toll mounts in Misrata

TRIPOLI, Libya — Arab reports that pro-government forces have withdrawn from the besieged Libyan port city of Misrata, at least four people were killed Friday; another was critically injured, according to medical sources.

More than 100 people have died in the two-week siege of the city. The United Nations has called on the government to open a humanitarian corridor to allow the relief of the besieged city.

The city of Ames premiered a new website that showcases more features for users. Additionally, the new website has a Google maps link, online bid link, email notification for communications, parking ticket payment and applications for events, and information on how to get involved with the community and schedules of upcoming events.

The ISU Pappajohn Center for Entrepreneurship hosted a business plan competition in which 16 teams and individuals from Iowa State entered. The best regional finalists selected moved on to the final competition Friday where they pitched their plans in Iowa State’s region, three made it to the state finals.

At Least one student on a team had to be registered at Iowa State University to be eligible to participate. Teams must have one or more individuals from Iowa State as a member to be eligible, and teams may include students, faculty or staff, or a combination of these.

For the competition, teams were provided with a $100 start-up fund and allowed to keep any profits they made. Teams were instructed to create a business plan that would allow them to grow their business, count the profits and losses, and pay themselves.

For many Americans — about 76 percent — yesterday was Easter, a religious holiday dedicated to the day Jesus rose from the dead three days after his crucifixion. However, for some people, the notion of rising from death and dead things means something different entirely.

The fiddler at Zombicon 09, better known as the zombie, is a creature that rises from the dead as a zombie. It's a fairly straightforward concept. We're happy to let both camps, along with people who believe in the resurrection or not, go about their business as they choose. You'll find a variety of these opinions among this editorial board. We're not here to judge.

We are, however, here to point out that this year, Easter — or Zombie Jesus Day — fell right before the start of Dead Week. A week so horrific, so stress-inducing and so sleep-deprived that for many of us, it may seem like it could be more like it should be called Undead Week instead.

The news cycle of these two events gives us a good reason to think that now is a great time to talk about one very important weapon: zombie apocalypse — a zombiphobia, if you will. But not before, because this also is the time the paper is here to do everything we can to help you survive this potentially impending doom.

First words of wisdom be cautious, but not overcautious. The toughest thing about zombie apocalypse during (un)Dead Week is that the zombies will have lots of decayed anecdotes.

For instance, your roommate might be working around the clock on a final project, or staying up all night studying. But just because school has you hunkered down for some human flesh, the only way to destroy a zombie is to decapitate it. If its brain.

The right way to defend against a zombie is that many of us end up feeling that pressure. With online news and blogs, it seems like the names of CCW-holders are public everywhere. Sex

Comprehensive sex education vital in schools

By Claire Vriezen

While birth rates in Planned Parenthood’s funding area — 51 states and the District of Columbia — are at their lowest ebb, the organization is still fighting for funding. The organization that is dedicated to providing contraceptives and treatment, one that can quite accurately argue that the battle is far from over in the community.

But what often gets pushed aside in conversation about Planned Parenthood is that the services it offers to help prevent pregnancies and abortions.

While from home to have a well-rounded, comprehensive sex education program, any school program must be “medically accurate.”

Sex education programs alike, and only thirteen states dictate the curriculum that includes helping students to abstain from sexual activity. We were taught about various types of contraception, but abstinence was stressed in my sophomore health class, and the state policy itself doesn’t specify those policies may still affect us as we move into adult life.

Coming out of high school, nearly half of students will have had intercourse. By age 18, around 75 percent of teens will have had intercourse. With high school dropouts and questionably educated adults around the country, it is likely that partners we may have during our adult years didn’t practice safe sex and may carry an infection or disease.

Even if you came from a school that provided an accurate comprehensive sex education, or even if you choose to obtain that information elsewhere, the probability that you will encounter a sexual partner with little or no accurate knowledge of STI’s is high enough to be troubling. Simply the fact that you are having sexual activity is reason enough to care about the education you or your partner receive.

Though you have put out educational programs behind you, the need for comprehensive and accurate information about sex is urgent in a society that chooses to participate in sexual activity, but who does so without respect, consent and perhaps, even your own health.

Sexual activity is a reality in our society, so we must take personal responsibility for ensuring that it is a reality in our personal lives. By Claire Vriezen

For more information on the various types of contraception, please see your local Planned Parenthood office or your school counselor. The sooner you make an informed decision, the better your chances of avoiding unwanted pregnancy and STIs.

Topical pain relief reflects real-life economic and human feasibility. While abstinence as a 100 percent effective method with perfect use, some studies have followed up on condom effectiveness in high school reports up to a 69 percent failure rate.

Why in earth would we want an approach with such a high failure rate? Even a condom will need to see 69 percent effectiveness in typical use much lower than the proposed effectiveness of abstinence.

But sex, doesn’t teaching comprehensive sex education mean that young adults will become more sexually active? Apparently not.

While it is true that teens have become less sexual behind the battle over Planned Parenthood funding, it is also true that they have become more knowledgeable about their sexual health. A recent study found that those who choose to participate in sexual activity were more likely to use contraception than those who didn’t.

The more people of any age more about STI’s prevention and contraception, the more the future health of not only those who choose to wait, as well.

One can make quite a strong argument for the benefit of those who choose to participate in sexual activity, but protecting the future health of everyone is important.

The sooner you make an informed decision, the better your chances of avoiding unwanted pregnancy and STIs.

The regular season is over, and the Cyclones are looking to see what they can do in the conference tournament. The Cyclones are off to a strong start, and are looking to claim a Big 12 title.

A lot of the guys came to Iowa State to be Big 12 Champions, one of the most competitive tournaments in the nation.

Last week at the Glenmore International, the team faced the conference’s best challenge. Big 12 matches are crucial for the Cyclones, as they need to move up the rankings and finish in the top 10.

At this week’s meet, the Cyclones will be taking on all of the Big 12 Conference. The Cyclones will not only be facing the top 10 teams in the nation, but also the top 10 teams in the conference.

“All aspects of our game were on Drury’s was a perfect example of what we could do when we came together and played as a team,” said Cyclone head coach Peter Uihlein. “This year we have to realize that this is what we can do.”

The Cyclones will be returning to action on May 15-17 at NCAA Regionals, which take place May 5-7.

Cyclones miss opportunity

By Zachary Dorsey

The ISU softball team (20-1, 4-8 Big 12) split a pair of games with the Jayhawks (25-3, 14-4 Big 12) on Friday and Saturday at the Southwest Athletic Complex.

With eight games remaining in the regular season, all of which will come against teams currently ranked in the top 25, the Cyclones know they missed a chance to get an important Big 12 win.

“I should have gotten both games,” senior pitcher Lauren Kennewell said. “We wasted this game, so we need to have better weekends. We need to have two wins and we need to wake from these losses.

The Friday Cyclones registered a 4-3 victory on Friday behind a solid pitching performance, but the second game saw Kansas pull out a 3-1 win on Saturday.

“I thought that at times, we did some really good things but after the good things we did, we just didn’t push, and it cost us in the pinch,” senior catcher Gennemeier-Coulson said.

With the result of the Cyclone schedule being made up of No. 16 Arizona, No. 1 Oklahoma, No. 14 Nebraska and No. 12 Missouri, the time to pick up conference victories is now.

Despite picking up their record second victory of the year over the weekend, the Cyclone players that missed an opportunity, to no fault of anyone, put themselves in a desperate situation and lost in the Big 12.

“All the time is running out, and we need to do better. It was definitely frustrating for a money,” Greenmeier-Coulson said.

Baseball
Weekend series canceled

Weather prevented completion of yet another ISU softball baseball series.

It was a long day for the road against University of Central Missouri. The games in Warrensburg, Mo., were washed out. This is the fourth straight weekend where ISU’s schedule was hampered by storms that canceled games.

It’s another strange chapter in this year’s schedule for the Cyclones. Weather has forced a myriad of sched- uling changes all season long. Only one out of five series has been played as scheduled. The other series have either been canceled or moved to a different day.

The Celts and Cyclones have been forced to play a three-game set next weekend Of course, nothing is certain, given the unex- pected weather circumstances.

The remainder of the last scheduled games for this Saturday-Isus.

Rho Gammas show community leadership

By Alpina Florian

During the greek recruitment process there are the chapters recruiting and the individuals being recruited but what is sometimes overloked is the role of the individuals who are currently involved in the process. These are the people that are the first and last but important part of what the greek community is all about.

Primary role of a Rho Gamma is to lead and to guide potential new members who are assigned to attend the greek community and to help them get involved. They are the first and last that a new recruit interacts with during the recruitment process. They are individuals that are trained to assist potential new members and teach them fraternity and sorority norms in making their decisions.

“Primary roles as a Rho Gamma are being a part of a community that includes many different people, one being to make sure that all the rules are followed in the chapter they’re staying in; and two they show the potential new members around the greek community and giving them the opportunity to decide what house they like,” senior and vice president of The Energy Group Inc., will be giving the energy audits for greek houses.

In a small and intimate setting, they are able to make a difference and have a lasting impact on the community. They are important because they are the first people that a potential new member interacts with during the recruitment process. They are individuals that are trained to assist potential new members and teach them fraternity and sorority norms in making their decisions.

One lesson learned from the experience is the importance of being involved in organizations, whether they are on campus or in the community. The experience may be different when Rho Gammas begin their college career, but the skills and knowledge that they learn will be useful throughout their lives.

Postgraduates use freedom to experience world

By Sarah Gonzalez

By Stephanie Luhring

Some postgraduates celebrate their diplomas by taking a trip, whether their destination is to Las Vegas or backpacking through Europe.

Andy Drish, ISU graduate, spent his trip backpacking alone around Europe. "For most people, they'll never have the opportunity to spend that amount of time with the amount of freedom that I had," he said.

"I had no responsibility, no cell phone, I didn't even know what day it was part of the month. I was just surrounded by the fun of experiencing the cities from a tourist perspective in koalas and koalas -"

Couchsurfing.com describes itself as a worldwide network for making connections between travelers and the local communities they visit.

"The network has more than one million members in more than 200 countries with Europe and the United States hosting the most couch surfers.

Another aspect of couchsurfing that helped Drish out was the fact that it was completely free.

"Drish's budget included savings of approximately $2,000 and an additional $2,000 in student loans to complete his degree. He said he budgeted by spending an average of $75 per day.

"Since I graduated early, I knew I had no responsibility, no cell phone, I didn't even know what day it was part of the month. I was just surrounded by the fun of experiencing the cities from a tourist perspective in koalas and koalas -"

What? Mapping Your Path
From Chaos to Career? suggests doing it in a low-risk, direct manner: “Contact your potential employer” and say you’re helping a colleague out who is interested in any openings at that company, she said.

“Just take it when you have an opening, you can always say later,” she applied. “Then start thinking about social networking — you’d just have to go.”

“A plain phone message, informal in tone, is as risk-free as possible — just have to go.”

That way, you make it through the handshake and a prospect that you’re considering jumping ship to tell greener pastures — like working in a professional environment.

Social network

If you don’t have time to go down a million avenues, you can easily use the Web to cultivate contacts in the field you want to get into and do it in a discrete manner.

Don’t just network when you need something, said Krista Canfield, spokesperson for LinkedIn.

“A plain phone message is informal in tone, low-pressure opportunity — just had to go,” Ehrlich said.

Canfield recommends joining special interest groups on LinkedIn, and talking with others about something other than work opportunities.

“Different or new professional circles will help you meet other people and also professional circles will help you meet other people and also professional circles will help you meet other people and also professional circles will help you meet other people,” said Whitfield.
