Men’s team places 5th in “wake up call” race

By Mark Specht

For the second straight year, the Cyclone’s men’s team has claimed a Big 12 championship. At the same time, the men’s team left the championship in Austin, Texas slightly disappointed with a fourth place finish.

On the women’s side, Iowa State finished fifth in the Big 12 cross-country championships.

The staff of the Memorial Union ranked second in enhancement of life staff helpfulness and food variety motion of events, student union service to students.

Survey analyzed assessed various educational benchmarks.

Club teaches spiritual principles of Buddhism

Dazang-Qi educates on Eastern religion

By Emma Althaud

The vast array of student organizations available at Iowa State provided this fall to the newly formed Dazang-Qi Buddhism club members.

The group serves exclusively practicing Buddhists and those simply looking to familiarize their curiosity about the faith.

Sheng Ran, graduate student in business administration, has been a part of the club for over two years.

“It helps us to connect the club with students, and we will continue to do that because Buddhism, this race, has been spiritual,” Ran said.

Dazang-Qi is in a term for a seven-kyip spiritual event commonly used in China to introduce participants to Buddhism. Although the 117 club members do not have seven years as a requirement around the teachings reflected in Dazang-Qi, basic Middle Class, junior in business management, has explored many religious branches including the club as education, not conversion. For the people who practice meditation, the club seeks to provide a bright spot for the men’s team taking 10th overall and being named All-Conference.

Experts share ‘blunt truth’ on marijuana

By Leah Hansen
35sh@iastate.edu

In the light of recently proposed marijuana legislation in Iowa, Dr. Christine Thurstone will present some of the ‘blunt truth’ about medical marijuana. Especially important is the fact that marijuana is still illegal under federal law.

Addressing issues concerning the proposed medical marijuana legislation, the lecture will be at 7 p.m. in the Shadow Mountain Room of the Memorial Union.

Thurstone should attend Dr. Thurstone’s lectures because he will be addressing a very pertinent issue from a kinesiology and health background.

As a student who promotes healthy decisions on campus, I’ve encountered quite a bit of anxiety and misinformation regarding marijuana.

The lecture will address health issues and treatments related to marijuana use. Through a discussion of the latest research, we can learn about what evidence supports the claims about marijuana’s effects on the body. We should also be aware that marijuana’s effects can have both positive and negative consequences.

Thurstone has devoted much of his career to discussing the effects of marijuana use. In the light of recently proposed marijuana legislation in Iowa, Dr. Thurstone will present some of the ‘blunt truth’ about medical marijuana.

Ethanol decreases our dependence

By Andrew Lauver

Ethanol is alcohol-based, so it helps clean the air by emitting less harmful fumes. With the invention of radio and the advent of broadcast media, which would eventually include television, the question became whether or not radio stations could broadcast anything they wanted to, politically speaking, just as newspapers could print anything they pleased. It was eventually decided that the airwaves were public property, not private property, as a newspaper, and therefore stations had to give airtime to various political positions and persons.

Over time, the broadcast journalism ethic of “fair and balanced” reporting spread to newspapers, where today we find Americans constantly griping about how liberal or conservative this or that paper is. While the greatest public duty for a newspaper may often include the inclusion of ideological and partisan sides, newspapers still have no obligation to do so. Newspapers can take sides, and sometimes they should.

So once again the Daily is faced with endorsing a presidential candidate. This year, we endorse no one.

Barack Obama’s inexperience and inattention has led to an ineffective presidency, and the Republican Party has failed to produce a qualified and competent alternative, choosing instead to select a necropolitical, flip-flopping, quack-ideological corporatist as their candidate. We cannot in good conscience sever to the modern philosopher of selecting the lesser of two evils, so we still constitute to choosing evil. A better candidate is insufficient.

We want a good one.

Our parties are becoming more partisan, our media fails to report facts and instead chooses to propagate despite knowing how rotten the system is. This changed, the Daily refuses to choose an evil.

Our pages are open to you, however, and will be through this Friday. At that point, in the interests of printing all the election-related letters Monday and Tuesday, Election Day, we will no longer accept letters related to the candidates and their campaigns. We now leave the debate to you, Iowa State.

The Daily endorse no 2012 candidate

Election made up of clueless Americans, of course, insulting one’s opponents in government. This philosophical bias toward fairness many of our Founding Fathers—from Alexander Hamilton to Thomas Jefferson—insisted upon. Newspapers have always been private ventures, owned by individuals. Big 12 victory against Baylor creates milestones for ISU

By Stephen KoeINGeFeld
Steele Jantz completed 36 out of 52 passes in the win.

Despite the speculation regarding his health, Jake Knott played through the pain of a re-aggravated shoulder injury and put in an effort that held opposing Baylor to a season-low in points.

The businesslike senior linebacker recorded 11 tackles — his 19th-career game with 10-plus tackles — while spearheading a defensive effort that held opposing Baylor to a season-low in points.

The tone of Iowa State's 35-21 victory against Baylor (3-4-0 Big 12) was set by an onside kick on the opening kickoff that was recovered by Baylor.

White returns, Lenz sidelined

Knot was not the only team captain whose health was a concern going into Iowa State's Homecoming against Baylor.

After sitting out the past two games due to a knee injury, running back Alex Lenz returned to the starting lineup against Baylor.

Halloween is two days away, and you still haven’t gotten a costume yet. All of the good costumes are taken, and it’s too late to order. You need something fast and easy but with limited resources. Sound familiar? We understand. Here at ISD Style, we have been there — and we know exactly what to do in the last-minute sense. What is it you need? An easy costume you can make but last minute. Just out of a bed sheet? You guarantee you’ll turn more heads with your clever get up than that girl wrapped in colored duct tape, just out of a bed sheet? We guarantee you’ll turn more heads with that girl wrapped in colored duct tape, claiming she is some sort of hard candy.

You know you want it.

Captain One-Pants. Wrap the sheet around your shoulders as a cape. Pair with Converse or flip flops and you’re the Captain One-Pants trout. If you’re feeling extra crazy, go ahead and draw a face on it. Plenty of cheap ones to go buy. We’ll start out with the easiest.
