Many college graduates are facing tough job markets as they seek to launch their careers. Parents and friends may be wondering what to get their 21st-century graduates that won’t break their budgets or pile up on clutter. Here are a few ideas that will put graduates in the right direction and help them achieve some of their goals without going over budget.

Pearls & ties

Sore young men to task anyone’s Blade II haircut and put on some shade and a tie. College grads are going to need some new clothes to fit their new lifestyles. This option can fit every budget and range from ties and pearl bracelets to suits and pencil skirts.

Things to use in their new city

For the grad you are buying for is heading to a new city for a job, land or grad school? They will need a car or a new piece of luggage can all be gifts that can fit their needs. Gas cards and city maps are also great options that can be very thoughtful.

Travel accessories

Many grads are going to see the transition period to become a full-fledged adult, friends that they met while studying abroad. Others will need travel accessories to move across the U.S. and the world. If the graduate you are shopping for has plans to travel, a gift certificate to a travel agency or a travel card that can be used in many places.

Financial planning help

Drish's experience was different. "I had no responsibility, no deadlines, no worries," he said. "I could use freedom to do whatever I wanted and I did. It was a liberating experience." But the experience was not without its challenges. "I never had the opportunity to experience the city from a tourist perspective in Europe. There were so many places to see, so many things to do, but I didn't have the time to do them all."

Start your online job search wisely, using social networks right.

What? Mapping Your Path
From Chase to Career?

Every job you apply for is a learning experience. Contact your potential employer and say you’re helping a colleague out who is interested in any openings at their company. The idea is if they can’t find the right position, they can point you to other opportunities. Just be careful not to annoy them.

Don’t just network when you need a job. Build connections, network with people you know, and network with people you don’t know. It’s about the relationships that you make and the trust that you build.

Where? LinkedIn is your professional network. Join groups, participate in discussions, and start networking with people who share your interests. LinkedIn is a powerful tool for networking.

When? LinkedIn works best when you use it consistently. Make time for networking every week, even if it’s just a few minutes.

Who? Your LinkedIn profile is your online resume. Make sure it’s up-to-date and highlights your skills and experience.

LinkedIn is a great tool for networking, but it’s not the only one. Don’t forget about other social media platforms, such as Twitter and Facebook.

Let’s say you work for a home improvement company, but your true passion is collecting antique chandeliers. These frightening children are dangerous, and you must always be on the look out for them.

If you don’t have the time to go to a new job interview, you can use the Web to interview candidates in the field you want to get into and do a virtual interview.

Consider a spray tan

A spray tan is an easy and quick alternative to sun or baking in a tanning bed. Shai Dഹš, the active ingredient in spray tan, absorbs UV light and causes your skin to turn golden brown. It is not a chemical or a plastic wrap; it is a color of your skin from within. You'll receive a nice glow and evens out your skin in no time.

Your plan of attack depends on when pictures of you and your friends start appearing everywhere.

To prepare for a spray tan, you may want to have a shower and wash your hair and facial hair with a clarifying shampoo. This is to increase your skin’s ability to absorb the color and avoid any algae-like deposits of dye. A day or so before your spray tan, you should avoid getting into the sun or tanning bed. This will ensure maximum sun-seeking capabilities.

Now say cheese!
