Our College Club
Memorial Union
Gitz spoke on the diagnosis of bovine mastitis, and Raymond Tobola closed the discussion with a summary of the control and treatment of the disease.

Accelerate Curriculum

In accordance with the speeded up curriculum at Iowa State, veterinary students will now attend school four quarters a year. Under the plan, a student will complete the professional course, which would ordinarily require four years, in three years.

Commission Students

Veterinary students, including pre-veterinary students, who have a satisfactory scholastic standing and who are attending accredited veterinary schools, will be commissioned second lieutenants in the Medical Administrative Corps, U. S. Army Reserve. Upon graduation, students may apply for commissions as first lieutenants in the Veterinary Corps. The new order, which is effective immediately, places veterinary students on the same status as medical students.

FACULTY

Dr. and Mrs. L. Meyer Jones are the parents of a six pound son, Ronald Lee, born on April 11. Dr. Jones is Assistant Professor of Veterinary Physiology and Pharmacology.

Dr. W. G. Venzke received his Doctor of Philosophy degree in Veterinary Anatomy on March 20. The title of his thesis was, “The Embryological Development of the Endocrine Organs of the Common Fowl (Gallus domesticus).”

Dr. L. E. St. Clair, assistant professor of Veterinary Anatomy, has a paper on “The Nerve Supply to the Bovine Mammary Gland” appearing in the January, 1942, issue of the American Journal of Veterinary Research.

CHAPTER

Jr. A.V.M.A. Honored

The Iowa State junior chapter of the A.V.M.A. has been chosen the winner of the first annual Cardinal Guild Service Award. The Cardinal Guild, which is the student governing body of Iowa State, selected the chapter on the basis of its contributions to Iowa State College during the past year.

The Service Award will be annually presented to the college organization which contributes most to campus life during the year. The number of students participating in the activities of the group, the services rendered, the permanence of the contributions to the college welfare, and the effect of the contributions in bettering Iowa State off the campus are all considered in making the award.

The Jr. A.V.M.A. in winning the award, was selected from eleven other campus groups which were nominated for the honor.

Some of the activities of the chapter which were judged by the Cardinal Guild as being valuable contributions to Iowa State were:

1. The Jr. A.V.M.A. successfully inaugurated a student honor code under which members regulate their conduct in and out of the classroom. The plan, which is the only one of its kind on the Iowa State campus, has proved very satisfactory to both students and the faculty. Since the honor code has been adopted, proctoring of examinations has been eliminated entirely.

2. The chapter publishes The Veterinary Student which serves the student by giving him actual experience in the publishing of a professional journal, and also increases the prestige of the Veterinary Division and Iowa State through its wide circulation. The magazine also serves as a means of maintaining desirable alumni contacts.

3. The organization maintains an education committee which works with the faculty for the purpose of improving the veterinary curriculum. Such an education committee is the first of its kind on the Iowa State campus.

Harold Held, '42, is the immediate president of the chapter.

Banquet

The annual banquet was held in Great Hall, Memorial Union, on April 22. Over 200 members and their guests attended.

Dr. R. M. Strunk, chief of the Conservation Commission of the State of Minnesota, was speaker at the banquet. His topic was, “Methods of Conservation Carried Out in Minnesota.” To illustrate his talk, Dr. Strunk showed colored movies of some of the activities of his commission.

Dr. E. A. Benbrook, professor of Veterinary Pathology, served as Master of Ceremonies.

In charge of the dinner were Frank Reimers, '42; Perry Jensen, '42; J. Bradley Crundwell, '43; Clark Stillinger, '44; and Donald McCracken, '45.

Sport Dance

The annual Spring Sport Dance was held at the Country Club on Saturday, April 18. One hundred and fifty members and their guests attended the affair. The committee in charge of the dance was made up of Eugene McClelland, '42; Lawrence Johanson, '43; Harold Stanton, '44; and Robert Nims, '45.

Picnic

As usual, eating—180 pounds of baked ham, 30 gallons of ice cream, besides quantities of baked beans, potato salad and coffee—was the feature of the annual barbecue picnic held at the Research Farm on May 12.
