The Veterinary Student will follow feeds and feeding, Animal Husbandry 416, and will include fundamental knowledge relative to growth, reproductive, and comparative biochemistry and physiology which comprise the modern science of nutrition of the domestic animals. Reference has already been made to the transfer of the course in poisonous plants back to the second year.

Clinical Conferences

Another significant change in the senior year is the introduction of clinical conferences as a course, Veterinary Medicine 484. This course will alternate with dairy hygiene, Veterinary Hygiene 420, and the course in diseases of reproduction and of the newborn, Veterinary Obstetrics 444. This will mean that one-third of the seniors each quarter will spend 2 afternoons per week in clinical conferences. At these conferences, selected large and small animal cases will be exhibited, examined, diagnoses made, and treatment prescribed. Both faculty and students will actively participate, and fundamental facts, insofar as they relate to the case, will be appropriately reviewed. Staff members from the basic departments of anatomy, physiology, pathology, and hygiene will participate in these clinic conferences.

Other changes for the senior year include a new course given in the Economics Department, Economics 365, which will embody many of the legal phases of veterinary medicine and will parallel the similar courses given in medical schools called medical jurisprudence.

The course in meats and meat products, Animal Husbandry 476, which has previously been elected by many of the veterinary students, is now a required course in the senior year preceding the course in meat hygiene, Veterinary Hygiene 426. Increased emphasis in Federal meat inspection regulations and in the duties of the Army Veterinary Corps on carcass grading and inspection of meat products, makes this addition important.

While the curricular changes made are not especially numerous, a careful study of them will show that they are of definite significance. They will aid in the better accomplishment of the objectives of the curriculum—which is to train our Iowa State veterinary graduates so that they may continue to creditably meet their professional responsibilities in the rapidly expanding fields of veterinary science.

Alumni Committee

The newest creation in the Veterinary Division is the Committee on Alumni Affairs. The organization is a standing committee of the Jr. A.V.M.A. and is under the advisorship of the dean of the Veterinary Division. Its formation was initiated by a desire to maintain closer contact between the veterinary alumni and the school and to maintain complete files. The Veterinary Student in continuing its policy of keeping alumni informed will publish information recommended by the alumni committee as a supplement to its own method of obtaining reports of alumni activity.

This venture is one requiring the cooperation of all alumni interested in keeping in touch with their former classmates. Does this cooperation mean a lot of work on your part? It does not. All that is necessary is a post card with pertinent information as regards your present location, vital statistics, and the like. Communications may be sent to the Alumni Committee of the A.V.M.A., the officers of the alumni committee within your class, if such a committee exists, or to the Veterinary Student.

While speaking of changes of location, it might be well to mention that an occasional post card from those recent graduates who as yet haven’t a wife and family to keep them stationary would aid in getting their next “Student” to the proper address.

POSTWAR PLANNING

service rendered. This problem must be treated ethically. With free enterprise in jeopardy in this country it behooves the profession as a whole to consider services ahead of personal gain.

Heretofore the preponderance of the veterinarian’s work was concerned with the actual treatment of disease while preventive medicine was handled largely through state and federal agencies. In the coming phase of intensified farming the private practitioner must develop in his clientele the desire and confidence to rely upon him for consultation in preventive medicine. With the advancement of programs of disease control and eradication and with the mechanization of agriculture it is only in this way that the practitioner can maintain and justify his existence in the community. He should also strive to ally himself with the physician in public health work. The veterinary service now being required by the army has highly educated many veterinarians in the field of meat, milk, and food inspection and sanitation. We must follow up this advantage and strive to create a demand from the people that the veterinarian be given this work to do. It is up to the veterinarian to create this demand.

The chaos following the last war demonstrated the disastrous effects of insufficient post war planning. Since we are a relatively small profession we must make up for our lack in numbers by earnest and enthusiastic support of progressive programs in order to establish and maintain a secure and respected position in the postwar professional and economic world.

too much time and equipment for the average practitioner, and most laboratories haven’t the personnel to run these tests if large numbers of samples are submitted.

Segregation of the infected cows would seem a simple matter, but a great many dairymen will not take the 2 weeks time and trouble necessary to break a cow into going into a different stanchion. They also consider washing udders with warm water and chlorine and drying them on separate towels, and disinfecting the teat cups of the milking machine as a procedure requiring too much time.
