STUDY BREAK?
try the tiers
Dear Reader,

Let's face it, sex sells. So in the struggle to reach the masses, the big bosses made a foray into the depths of Parks Library. Their goal: To put one ISU myth to rest and to plaster some sexy people on the front cover of our illustrious publication.

Editor-in-Chief Bethany Kohoutek and Managing Editor Paul Kix spent two long nights roaming the dark and dingy stacks of the Parks Library tiers armed with silenced cell phones, ears pricked for the faintest sound of lovin’. Check out page 16 to see what they found (or didn’t).

And hopefully, you who picked up ethos because of our steamy cover scene will keep reading, because we’ve got some great stuff in here.

Once again, we’re taking a deeper look at the strange and curious lives Iowa State students lead, from the fast times of the Iowa State Football Varsity Marching Band in “Band Together” by Dustin Kass to the rigid rules of the few hardcore straight-edges Erin Randolph tailed for “Living on the Straight Edge in Ames.”

And with tuition continuing its upward spiral, Wendy Weiskircher did some digging on Iowa State’s dogged monetary attempts to draw minorities to this oh-so-white school and keep them here in “The Color of Money.”

A change must be announced, as well. We’ve got a new Web site you can check out to find all of our features, departments and photos: www.ethosmagazine.com. So if you forget your copy of ethos and need a break from studying for finals, look us up and let us know what you think.

Sincerely,

SARA TENNESSEN | senior editor
