Let's be honest. You don't have time for a relationship. You're young, you're hot, you're raging with hormones, and you just want some sex. What better way to solve those desires than by finding a one-night stand? I offer it as an option. After all, it is my job as your campus sex-pert to educate. So I, along with a few of my friends, compiled a few theories that are sure to give even the loneliest sorry bastard a chance.

THE "GET PSYCHED UP" THEORY

It is very important that you surround yourself with people who bring out your innerslut. We are talking ho-tastic, shit-talkin', ass-grabbin', crazy mother- hehaws who will support you all night long. And while you are at it... challenge each other. Give each other goals. Goals are good. Goals equal motivation. Motivation equals results. And nothing motivates more than money. It's easier to make yourself approach someone when money is at stake. So make a bet with a friend along these lines: A) "If I don't score tonight, I'll pay you $20," or B) "If I DO score tonight, you'll pay me $20." The choice is yours. You can either wake up the next morning satisfied and $20 richer, or you can find yourself alone and poor. And let's face it, isn't that getting old?

THE "DRESS FOR SEX-CESS" THEORY

Whether it be an interview, test or first date, people are always telling us to dress for success. Are humans that vain, that superficial to deem someone worthy only on the basis on his or her attire? The answer: Hell yes. And this concept has never been more apparent than when you are trying to land a one-night stand. I mean, how many times did I get passed up in my classy Ann Taylor sweater set for that blonde Gadzooks-wearing bitch with the tits up to her chin? It took numerous nights of coming home orgasm-free to realize that in this game — if you can’t beat them, join ’em! Girls, ditch the turtle-necks, the relaxed-fits, the inhibitions... and slut it up! Guys, bust out those pants that are just tight enough to accent your special package... when we say size doesn’t matter, we’re lying. Put the goods on the shelf and you might get yourself a deal.

THE “LONG ISLAND ICED TEA” THEORY

Now, I am no econ major, but I can tell you that if you use this theory, your net gain will take you to financial bliss. You see, the task at hand is to get laid as quickly as possible. So instead of going with beer, spend the extra $2 and upgrade your drink (and your night) to a Long Island. With every five dollars you spend, you will be five steps closer to a feeling of accomplishment. It makes you prettier, funnier, wittier and sexier. Can you really put a price on all that?

THE “LESS IS MORE” THEORY

Ever hear of the saying “no strings attached?” Well, by finding out a plethora of information about the person you plan on scoring with, you are defying this uncomplicated, effortless and painless concept. With every bit of information you find out about him, you are attaching strings. It goes something like this: you know his major... that’s a string. You find out where he lives... another string. You learn his last name... you guessed it, a freaking string. And with every additional fact another string is attached until you’re in that tangled mess called a relationship. We all know it’s downhill from there. Game over. Fun over. You’ll eventually end up hating each other. So LESS IS MORE!

Unless, if you don’t know his last name it decreases your chances of stalking him later. So do yourself a favor, skip the questions and get on with the good stuff.

THE “MORNING AFTER” THEORY

Alright, you sealed the deal and you kept conversation to a minimum. Now the most crucial step of the night: the getaway. If this is going to be a true one-night stand, you have to do it like Tom Cruise did it in Top Gun. Leave before he or she wakes up! (Leaving behind the little paper airplane isn’t necessary.) Just get the hell out and take everything with you. No, dammit, don’t look back. Just get out.

THE “ASK FOR FORGIVENESS” THEORY

I use this theory about as often as I play with a football. However, there are times when you are walking home the next morning, and you feel like you are going straight to hell. And I use the word “straight” loosely... very loosely. The problem is, going to church usually isn’t an option. Either it is the middle of the week, or you are too hung over to get your ass out of bed. So what do you do? Try dressing for the Lord. Just put on a white button-down, pull a nice wool sweater over it, wear your shiny black shoes and get your hair all nice and pretty. Then, with every strut you take, you will be putting your guilt behind you and getting one step closer to a feeling of accomplishment. e
