ethos: What do you want for Christmas?
Magill: Well, I'm currently applying to visit Israel, so maybe I might not be celebrating Christmas here.

ethos: But if you were to walk into GSB when you got back and get a gift, what would it be?
Magill: A magic wand.

ethos: What does the magic wand do?
Magill: Everything.

ethos: As a song title, what are your goals for GSB?
Magill: Well, I'm a big fan of the Beatles, and I can't help but think that "Come Together" couldn't be a better song title for this year.

ethos: Who wins a twirl off: the UNI twirler, the Iowa twirler, or you?
Arnold: I'd like to say I'd win, but you never know. All the twirlers know each other because we've all competed against each other.

ethos: What's the scariest trick you've ever done?
Arnold: The scariest trick I've ever done was the Toss Double Illusion because at a competition it came down and hit me. I got two black eyes, and my nose bled.

ethos: Have you ever twirled anything besides batons?
Arnold: I've twirled Samurai Knives and hooked them together. That's fun. I've also twirled fire on the batons. It singes your arm hair and really smells and sometimes the gas gets on you. But it's a lot of fun because the baton gets a lot of air and the crowd just goes wild.
