It was a dark and stormy night at the ever-daunting Willow Hall. Drunken freshmen - and a handful of creepy upperclassmen trying to take advantage of aforementioned freshmen - were busy mulling about the grounds. Their inebriated stupors resulted in mischievous episodes not limited to sneaking beer past their RAs, writing inappropriate things on neighbor's dry erase boards, dragging deer heads into elevators...

So the deer thing doesn't exactly coincide with the other "mischievous episodes" mentioned, but it happened. Although Willow's custodial staff has had their fair share of cleaning up everything from birdseed to inexperienced freshmen's vomit, Rich Garrey's scariest horror story includes a very dead deer.

Arriving at Willow's fourth floor that night, Garrey saw that the head had already been removed by an unlucky student, and taken to the dumpster to join Bambi's limbs. The custodial staff, however, was in charge of cleaning the blood and hair remnants that were embedded into the carpet and elevator crannies.

That night, the Iowa State custodial staff cleaned up after a juvenile student who thought it would be comical to bring a deer head into one of the frequently used elevators in a busy dorm. Keeping the residence halls clean is technically their job, but next time you get plastered and decide to pull a brainless prank, sober up a bit before you do it. Our campus custodians already clean up after plenty of our nights out, and disposing of dead animals doesn't need to be added onto their already substantial to-do list.

EARN $$$

- Here are some easy ways to get money without sending unidentified spammers your bank number.

BioLife

- Estimated earnings: $65 a week (subject to change)
- Time commitment: 2 to 4 hours (3 for the first time with required physical)
- Location: 1618 Golden Aspen Dr
  Ames, IA 50010
- Description: Donate your plasma to Biolife and receive money twice a week. You can donate twice a week with a required minimum of two days between donations. Biolife requires a physical to be admitted into the donation program. Biolife's trained employees hook you up to a machine that removes blood, separates it from the plasma and puts red blood cells back in. The process takes about an hour or so and you can spend the down time studying, reading, surfing the Internet, watching movies, or listening to music while hooked up to the machine.

Tutoring

- Estimated earnings: $8.00 per hour (or $9.00 with a completed undergrad)
- Time commitment: 2 to 20 hours a week
- Location: http://www.dso.iastate.edu/asc tutoring/becomeatutor.html
- Description: If you earn a B or better in a course, hold a GPA of 2.5+, and have recommendations ready, you can become a tutor for that course. You meet with a group of students for two hours a week and can schedule appointments otherwise. Enjoy teaching the skills you already have.
