Dr. Nathan N. Crawford, '09, of Baltimore, Md., died May 13, 1949.

Dr. Nathan N. Crawford, '09, of Baltimore, Md. died May 13, 1949.

Dr. G. H. Glover

Dr. G. H. Glover, 86, founder and retired dean of the Division of Veterinary Medicine, Colorado A. & M. College, died Jan. 11 at his home in Fort Collins, where he lived and worked for more than 60 years as teacher, livestock hygienist, and educator. He was graduated from Iowa State College in 1885. Among his classmates were Sesco Stewart, W. B. Niles, Charles McBryde, E. E. Sayers, D. C. Collins, and W. E. Johnson—all of whom made veterinary history.

Until 1907, Dr. Glover was variously occupied in experiment station and livestock sanitary work and in teaching veterinary science to students of agriculture. Since then, his labors were buoyant and fruitful. He marched straight into the presidency of the AVMA in less than three years (San Francisco in 1910) without a dissenting voice. His flair of surrounding himself with Newsom’s and Kingman’s and Farquharson’s and his own innate ability took Fort Collins to every nook of the veterinary world. That something not made by hands, and the knack of telling the world sans boastful fanfare, are what our departed colleague had in the nth degree.

The veterinary world will not cease to love him, for “to live in hearts we leave behind is not to die.”

He is survived by his widow, nee Lenore Talty; his son, Grant; three grandchildren, one of whom is Dr. G. N. Glover of Torrington, Wyo.; and seven great grandchildren.

HERO

The Des Moines Tribune of Nov. 18 carried an article about the heroic death of an Iowa veterinarian, Captain Burton C. Thomson of Swea City.

Dr. Thomson graduated from Iowa State College in 1938 and entered the army the same year. He was at Corregidor at the time of its surrender to the Japs May 6, 1942. Upon his refusal to surrender food supplies which were intended for American soldiers, he was shot by the Japs.

An American soldier has been indicted by a Federal grand jury in New York City for treason in connection with Captain Thomson’s death.

Classmates of Captain Thomson would like to see some kind of memorial erected at Iowa State College to the heroism of this veterinarian.

It has been reported, that penicillin given in daily dosages of 1 to 1½ million units, has a curative effect on cattle suffering from pyelonephritis caused by Corynebacterium renale. This organism is the commonest cause of hematuria.

AVMA Convention

The American Veterinary Medical Association has set Aug. 21–24, 1950, as the dates for its eighty-seventh annual convention, to be held at Miami Beach, Fla.

Headquarters for the oceanside meeting will be the new, air-conditioned Municipal Auditorium, now under construction and scheduled to be completed soon.

Dr. E. D. Clawson of Miami has been named general chairman of the Committee on Local Arrangements. Dr. Robert P. Knowles of Miami is vice-general chairman and Dr. M. B. Teigland of Miami, general secretary.

In recent years, Miami Beach has won widespread popularity as a summer vacation place as well as a winter resort. Its tropical-paradise surroundings, seaside attractions, and excellent hotels lure many thousands of travelers every summer who, seeking the most for their vacation dollars, enjoy all the magnificence of this famous playground at a fraction of the winter season costs.

The Committee on Local Arrangements is having blocs of rooms in various hotels set aside for the convention. The choice is being made from among the 322 hotels in Miami Beach, with particular attention to nearness to the Municipal Auditorium. In general, summer rates for even the most luxurious rooms are lower than those for mediocre accommodations in other convention cities.

Plans also are being made for convention tours originating at several key locations in the United States. One of the proposed tours is a boat trip down the Atlantic Coast from New York City.

Oral papillomas in dogs often respond nicely to iodine therapy. One-half to two grains per pound body weight of sodium iodide should be administered intravenously to the dog, every five to seven days. Up to six such injections may be needed. Similar results may also be seen with the use of enteric coated capsules of potassium iodide.—Dr. Dwight Smith
