Fall Banquet

The Eleventh Annual Fall Banquet, attended by Junior A.V.M.A. members and faculty of the Division of Veterinary Medicine, was held in Great Hall, Memorial Union, Iowa State College, on September 24, 1958. Norman Cheville was general chairman and master of ceremonies.

Dr. William S. Monlux, faculty advisor, welcomed the freshman class into the organization with an urge to "develop a class spirit to overcome institutional exhaustion."

Dean I. A. Merchant introduced the veterinary medical staff and associated departmental staff members.

Dr. R. E. Rebrassier, guest speaker at the eleventh annual Fall Banquet.

Dr. R. E. Rebrassier, President of the American Veterinary Medical Association, was guest speaker of the evening. Dr. Rebrassier presented some timely advice on problems of veterinary medicine. Some of these problems were: more help for student chapters from the A.V.M.A., problems created by vertical integration in agriculture and the shift to preventive medicine from curative medicine. Dr. Rebrassier also suggested that "if you talk about a colleague you are talking about yourself."

A $300 Borden Scholarship Award for an outstanding academic record was presented to Buddy E. Vagts of the senior class. This award, presented by Dean I. A. Merchant, is given to the student with the highest scholastic record at the end of three years in veterinary medicine.

Annual Awards Given Veterinary Students

The Iowa State College Student Chapter of the American Veterinary Medical Association held its annual convocation and special awards meeting June 4, 1958.

The G. G. Graham prizes are cash awards given annually to the two outstanding senior students in large animal clinical veterinary medicine on the basis of scholarship, attitude and general adaptability. Roger Hogle, Conrad, Iowa, and William DeZeeuw, Sioux Center, Iowa, were the recipients.

Jerrold W. Hix, Alta, Iowa, received the Wayne H. Riser Award, a wrist watch, which is given annually to the senior student who has shown the greatest interest and proficiency in small animal medicine and surgery.

The George Judish Scholarship prize was awarded to Bruce Rosenquist, Chicago, Ill. This award is given to the senior with the highest scholastic record. It consists of the initiation fees and annual dues for four years of membership in the AVMA, along with its official journal.

Warren Bohnhoff, Plymouth, Wis., was the recipient of the annual $25 award given by the Women’s Auxiliary of the AVMA to the senior student who demonstrated creative activity other than scholarship during his junior and senior years.

The Paul F. Starch Phi Zeta Award, which emphasizes character, interest and leadership is given annually to the first year student who has shown those qualities. Robert Gleek, Rising City, Neb., was the recipient.

Stanley Harless, Gresham, Neb. received the Burton C. Thompson Award. This award of $100 is given annually to a freshman student and is based on general integrity, scholarship, and adaptability.

Carl Graham (junior), Lancaster, Wis., and Keith Cogley (sophomore), Grinnell, Iowa, were recipients of the I.S.C. Veterinary Medical Alumni Assn. awards. These are annual awards of $100 each to a sophomore and junior student and are based on general aptitude, scholarship, financial need and extracurricular activities.

The Merck Veterinary Manual Awards for outstanding scholastic achievement in veterinary studies during the current academic year went to James Collins, Dixon, Ill., and Richard Jones, Nephi, Utah.

Each year some incoming senior has his financial burden lightened by the $300 cash Lane-Wells Scholarship award. James Dunn, Purdum, Neb., received this award which is based on a good scholastic record and the student having earned a good share of his college expenses.

This year Robert Klindt, Albert City, Iowa, was the recipient of the George N. Catt Scholarship award. This scholarship of $300 cash is given to an incoming senior and is based on scholarship and the student having earned a major part of his expenses. The award is to allow the student more time for a broader course of study or participation in worthwhile campus activities.

To climax the evening, the I.S.C. Student Chapter of the American Veterinary Medical Association presented Dr. William Monlux, newly elected faculty adviser, with an Amana deep freeze. The award was to show appreciation for his guidance and teaching ability.

Auxiliary News

The Auxiliary to the Jr. A.V.M.A. held the first meeting of its eleventh year of existence on October 2 at the Memorial Union. Fifty new wives were guests for the evening. Approximately 120 were present.

The secretary read a citation to the group from the March of Dimes Committee commending them for their work in addressing envelopes.

The speaker for the program was Mrs. Nate Phipps of Cherokee, Iowa, a former president of the auxiliary. Her husband is a veterinarian and a 1956 graduate of Iowa State College.

At Homecoming, Saturday, October 11, members of the auxiliary helped the Jr. A.V.M.A. in serving luncheon to returning veterinarians and their families.

A full and varied program is planned for the auxiliary this year. It will strike a balance between social activities and service projects.

Summer Employment

For Juniors

Real Aid in Making Class Work More Meaningful

Employment from Ohio to California, from Minnesota to Tennessee, with lots of work and lots of new ideas, resulting in an increased zest for learning, highlighted the summer jobs for the incoming senior students. A tabulation of the areas where students worked shows at least 25 different counties in Iowa and 9 states outside of Iowa represented. Over one-third of these students worked in states other than Iowa. Approximately two-thirds of the senior students worked in a large animal or mixed practice. Small animal practice, government, commercial, and research work accounted for the remaining one third.
