lions rise
over the sun
when the tide of day is out to chase the rodents
in the field
and scorpions
from their nests of rock and grass
leave crooked tracks
across the moist sand
and rising lions
over the sun
when the tide of day is in yawn idly
in their familiar noble thrones stretch their lurid golden forelimbs and
scratch the sun
bowing to the dusk
and paw at the coming of night with its many eyes and rodents
out of reach
