Hunting

Jodi Lartius*

*Iowa State University

Copyright ©1976 by the authors. Sketch is produced by The Berkeley Electronic Press (bepress). http://lib.dr.iastate.edu/sketch
Hunting

by
Betty Lartius
Distributed Studies 4

When the fields
  having given up their summer's work to your wagons
  rested
  under grey blankets
  of young winter sky
and the air
  shivered me in my pink sweater, you would take down your gun and seeing me watching you you would pretend you were only of a mind to clean it,
but I would beg with little girl eyes until laughing
you would say
  "Alright, Skeeter.
  You can come with me hunting."
And Mother would bundle me up in itchy wool
and make you wear your scarf and we would start off across the fields
behind the house, Pepper bounding and leaping
and nosing,
the only sound
the crush of our feet
on dusty corn husks.
And then a rabbit would panic out and you would raise your gun and I would wail
"Don't kill Peter Rabbit, Daddy" and you would hesitate, lose the rabbit in the greyness, Pepper complaining
and it would go on like that until grey turned toward black and we'd start back
you carrying me
piggyback
because I was tired and I liked the feel of my arms around your neck.
My eyes dimly followed Pepper bounding and leaping ahead until easy jolting lulled me and I would wake up in the morning not remembering you tucked me in bed.