FOR CARL
by
Jim Kastner
English Grad.

He opened doors
don drunken nights,
most nights,
with his woolly head,
like a ram.

Now he's dead—
his skull smashed flat
against a tree—
bucked off a snowmobile.
One more wooden door
opened to eternity.

A BLEAK TIME

I am
a landscape artist
with my palette
of indigo,
emerald, plum,
gold and magenta—
painting at the pole
in six-month darkness—
staring at white canvas.
