EDITORIAL NOTES

Merill Guarneri*

It has come to the attention of our staff that Dr. John Greve has been the faculty advisor for the ISU Veterinarian for twenty-five years. We, therefore, thought it would be appropriate to dedicate the editorial pages to this fine man.

Dr. Greve is an extremely busy and involved person. He has been at the Iowa State University College of Veterinary Medicine for almost thirty years. During this time period he has been involved in a variety of organizations. He has been the faculty advisor for SCAVMA, INTERVET, Omega Tau Sigma, and the ISU Veterinarian. He has also been involved in academic advising.

During his spare time, Dr. Greve also teaches classes in medical terminology and parasitology. Besides his teaching, he does parasitology work for the teaching hospital and private practitioners.

Dr. Greve earned his DVM in 1958 from Michigan State University and his M.S. in 1959 from the same institution. He received a Ph. D. in veterinary parasitology in 1963 from Purdue University. He began teaching at Iowa State University in 1963.

Since coming to ISU, Dr. Greve has earned three teaching awards. These include the Norden Distinguished Teacher Award, the Outstanding Teacher Award, and the SCAVMA Teaching Award. He has been honored in many other ways by various organizations.

Dr. Greve is dedicated to many professional organizations and committees. He is involved in community organizations, as well. Along with all of his other accomplishments, John Greve has published articles, abstracts and book chapters.

As can be seen, Dr. John Greve is a man of many accomplishments. As involved as he is, he is still able to be a husband and a father. It is my opinion, however, that one of his greatest accomplishments is being a person to whom other people can talk and relate and on whom they can rely. I know all of us on the ISU Veterinarian staff appreciate all he has done for us. We would all like to thank him for his time.

*Merill Guarneri is a third year student in the College of Veterinary Medicine at Iowa State University.

Photo--Dianne Hellwig

Iowa State University Veterinarian
Talking in medical terminology Latin to all but the Greek, helping vet students learn the proper language to speak.
Answering questions on parasites of all animal types,
noting points of interest with hips and hypes.
Keeping with the times of modern practice and thought,
seldom is a man so often after sought.

Devoting energy and effort to ISU Vet Med, remaining a husband and father in good stead.

John Greve is a man of considerable intelligence and charm, onward he ventures, his wife, Sally, on his arm.
Historically involved in organizations too numerous to count,
oblly onward a war against parasites he does mount.

Giving twenty-five years as faculty advisor to ISU Vet, remembering and looking back, we hope, with no regret.
Enjoying the time he has so willingly given to our staff,
valuable for his input and for making us laugh.
Everyone of us is grateful and we'd all like to say,
Thank-you for your time and we hope many more years you'll stay!!

Merill Guarneri