Editor's Note

Recently, our former advisor, Dr. John H. Greve, conducted an informal e-mail survey of all the veterinary medical librarians in the United States questioning whether the ISU Veterinarian is the only publication of its kind in the country. Specifically, the question was asked, “Is there another College of Veterinary Medicine publishing a student-produced journal like the ISU Veterinarian?” As of this date, Dr. Greve has received no responses indicating that there is another journal of this kind in the U.S. Dr. Greve states that “the veterinary medical librarians of our nation are very keen on taking on such questions and ferreting out an answer.” Because of these facts, he and Bill Wiese of our Veterinary Medical Library feel confident that the ISU Veterinarian is indeed in a league by itself.

Our thanks to Dr. Greve and Bill Wiese for taking the initiative to ask this question and reaffirm the mission of this publication, which has always been to be the best.◆

The Iowa State University Veterinarian is published twice a year in Ames, Iowa.
